WORK IS UNDERWAY at the site for the new Abigail Adams Statue. The statue paying tribute to the nation's second First Lady will be erected in the Hancock-Adams Common adjacent to United First Parish Church (background). The ceremony will take place this fall. No date has been announced yet. Abigail Adams was the first woman to be the wife of one U.S. President (John Adams) and mother of a U.S. President (John Quincy Adams.) The only other woman with this distinction is the late Barbara Bush.

Statue For Nation's Second First Lady To Be Dedicated This Fall

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city has begun preparing the site within the Hancock-Adams Common where the new statue of Abigail Adams will be placed later this fall.

While a dedication date for the new statue has not yet been finalized, a pair of keynote speakers are lined up for the ceremony.

Mayor Thomas Koch announced plans to place a new statue of Abigail Adams within the common earlier this year, after a group of residents urged the city to return to the downtown the statue of Abigail and a young John Quincy Adams that was removed when construction of the common began. Koch commissioned Sergey Eylanbekov, the artist who crafted the statues of John Adams and John Hancock that bookend the park's promenade, to craft the new statue.

The new Abigail Adams statue will be located in front of the United First Parish Church, a spot that contractors began ready-EMPLOYEES AT FoxRock Properties in Quincy dropped off nearly 300 donated backpacks for Interfaith Social Services' 2022 Backpack Drive.

VOLUNTEERS FROM Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts' "Blue Crew" assisted in sorting donation and filling backpacks with supplies at Interfaith Social Services. Volunteers distributed hundreds of backpacks to the children of Interfaith's food pantry clients in August.

Local Students Receive Free Backpacks, School Supplies

Hundreds of families received new backpacks and school supplies from Interfaith Social Services during the month of August, lightening the burden of back-to-school expenses for South Shore families in need.

Generous donors and local businesses provided backpacks and school supplies for more than 700 children whose families utilize Interfaith's programs. Another 200 backpacks filled with supplies went to Quincy Public Schools to be distributed to children that may need them.

Interfaith Social Services operates one of Greater Boston's largest emergency food pantries, a mental health counseling center, Thrift Shop and homelessness prevention program. Since 1947, Interfaith Social Services has been a safety net for thousands of children and families from the South Shore who are struggling to make ends meet.

Interfaith's food pantry conducts several seasonal initiatives throughout the year aimed at bringing joy to children who may be growing up in difficult situations. One of those initiatives is Interfaith's annual Backpack Drive, intended to make sure students start out the school year outfitted with the supplies they need to succeed.

"We've seen prices going up on just about everything," said Natalie McMenamin, Interfaith's Seasonal Project Coordinator. "Our food pantry clients are really struggling with the rising costs of food and other necessities. It's wonderful to be able to help them with some of these back-to-school expenses. It's our hope that all the children we serve will start the school year prepared and that their parents have one less thing to worry about."

is made possible through the support of many individuals, businesses and organizations who donate backpacks, supplies and monetary contributions during the summer. Several local businesses and organizations supported the program this year with donations of backpacks and supplies, including Arbella Insurance, Black Rock Country Club Women's Golf, the Braintree Council Knights of Columbus, First Church of Squantum, First Congregational Church Randolph, FoxRock Properties, and Paige Landscape Company.

Volunteer groups, including Blue Cross Blue Shield of Massachusetts, South Shore Bank, and SIGNET Electronics Systems, helped sort incoming donations and fill backpacks with notebooks, pens, pencils, markers and other supplies.

345 New Apartments Approved On Centre Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

The Planning Board recently approved a developer's proposal to construct a seven-story, 345-unit apartment building on Centre Street in West Quincy.

Atlantic Development of Hingham went before the Planning Board with its proposal for 269 Centre St. on Sept. 14 and received a certificate of consistency for the project that evening. The developer is the same company that is constructing The Abby, a mixed-use development with 610 apartments and 45,000 square feet of retail space at the North Quincy MBTA station.

Atlantic Development will construct its latest building on a parcel of land that contains 120,808 square feet of space, roughly 2.8 acres, and includes the present home of A Monti Granite, city-owned lots, and other properties within the block bounded by Centre, Intervale and Vernon Streets. The site is zoned Industrial A and is located within the new transit-oriented overlay zoning district that city councillors approved in June.

Speaking at the recent hearing, DJ MacKinnon, the president of Atlantic Development, said there are great amenities in the vicinity of West Quincy, including Granite Links, the Blue Hills Reservation, South Shore Plaza, office parks at Crown Colony and in Braintree, and stores like BJ's and Home Depot. In addition, he said the project site is not far from Quincy Center.

"We feel this is a great location," MacKinnon said.

There are two other larger multi-family developments on Centre Street already, he added, the Deco apartment building to the south of the project site and Lincoln Heights to the north of it.

Parking for the project will be included in the first two floors of the building, which will house a combined 405 spaces. An additional 10 spaces will be provided outside the building for leasing and deliveries. The 415 total spaces are more than what is required by the city's zoning code within the transit-oriented overlay district, where one space is needed for each residential unit.

"We are in full compliance with all the dimensional requirements," MacKinnon said. "Actually, on the parking side, we're at 1.2 spaces per unit. The zoning requirement is one but having gone through the leasing experience and so forth at The Abby, we actually feel 1.2 is a more appropriate number."

The parking area will include electric vehicle charging stations when the building opens, MacKinnon said, and the building will be constructed so that additional charging stations can be added in the future.

The 345 apartments will include 74 studio units, 134 one-bedroom units, 65 one-bedroom units that also have a den, 48 two-bedroom units, and 21 units with two bedrooms and a den. MacKinnon said that 10 percent of the units on site would be set aside for affordable housing.

A new public courtyard area will be located along Centre Street with granite elements as a nod to West Quincy's historic quarry industry, MacKinnon said. A dog-walking area for tenants will be located near that

THE HISTORY CHANNEL

• On Oct. 6, 1866, the Reno gang carries out the first robbery of a moving train, making off with $13,000 from a train in Indiana. This new method of sticking up moving trains in remote locations that were low on law enforcement, instead of trains sitting in depots, soon became popular in the American West.

• On Oct. 4, 1927, sculpting begins on the granite images of presidents Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln and Roosevelt at Mount Rushmore. Jefferson's image was originally fashioned to the right of Washington. Within two years, the face was badly cracked, and workers blasted the sculpture off the mountain. Sculpting began again with Jefferson on the left side of Washington.

• On Oct. 5, 1947, President Harry Truman makes the first televised presidential address, asking Americans to cut back on food to help starving Europeans. He requested that the public voluntarily forgo meat on Tuesdays, eggs and poultry on Thursdays and to save a slice of bread each day.

• On Oct. 8, 1956, New York Yankees right-hander Don Larsen pitches the first no-hitter in the history of the World Series. It was a perfect game that no one matched until Philadelphia Phillies pitcher Roy Halladay in 2010.

• On Oct. 9, 1967, socialist revolutionary and guerrilla leader Che Guevara, age 39, is captured and executed by the Bolivian army. In 1997, Guevara's remains were found and sent back to Cuba, where they were reburied in a ceremony attended by President Fidel Castro and thousands of Cubans.

• On Oct. 7, 1983, Sean Connery stars in "Never Say Never Again" as the British secret service agent James Bond, a role he last played in 1971. The film's title referenced the fact that the Scottish-born actor had previously remarked that he would never play Agent 007 again.

• On Oct. 3, 1995, Heisman Trophy winner O.J. Simpson is acquitted of the double murder of his estranged wife, Nicole Brown Simpson, and her friend, Ronald Goldman, despite a DNA match, a wound on Simpson's hand, the recent purchase of a Stiletto knife and matching shoeprints at the scene.

This butterfly lives from Florida over to eastern Texas, and northward into Minnesota, Wisconsin, Michigan, New York, Vermont, and New Hampshire. Adults prefer to feed on tree sap, fermenting fruit or dung, but they also take nectar from flowers and frequently feed at mud puddles. Plant hosts for red-spotted purple larvae are black cherry, deerberry, willows, aspens, poplars, cottonwood, hawthorn, birches and black oak.

ing earlier this month. Koch said the city worked with the residents' group to choose the site for the statue.

"We had a group of folks that stepped up that are kind of serving on a committee on that," he said. "We worked with them on the final site selection, some of the folks that had written to The Sun concerned about not being in the loop and we've been working very well with them - Linda Stice, Emily Lebo and Linda Monaco, that whole crew.

"They've been participating with the architect on the plans and what quotes we're going to use, what they are...so it's coming together."

The mayor said he was pleased the new statue of Abigail Adams was being placed along the promenade, a short distance from where the statue of her husband, John Adams, sits at the northern end of the park.

"I know that initially there was some criticism we hadn't gotten to Abigail yet. You know what? It was deserved in the sense that we knew we were going to be doing something at some point, we were trying to tie it into the performing arts center, but the ladies were right. Let's get it here in the promenade," Koch said.

"That's where she belongs with her husband, so I'm pleased that it's almost here and she'll have a prominent place right here in the promenade."

The new Abigail Adams statue will be heroic-sized, Koch said, the same size as the two other statues within the common. Koch said the statue is in the process of being crafted in Italy.

"The artist is done with his molds. Now it goes through the process of going from clay to bronze," Koch said. "How they do all that is not my world, but it's getting close to going to the foundry, which then has to go through a process. Then, of course, it has to get here from Italy. She's not going to walk."

Koch said the new statue would be dedicated later this fall, but the date has not yet been finalized. Two keynote speakers have been chosen for the ceremony.

The first keynote speaker is Danielle Allen. She is a professor at Harvard University, an author, and the former chair of the Pulitzer Prize Board, among other roles.

"She's a professor at Harvard and she's a history person and she's an Adams expert," Koch said.

The second person chosen as a keynote speaker is Catherine Allgor. She is the president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, an author and former college professor.

"She's the president of Mass. Historic and obviously she's a history person and they've got all the Adams papers, so she's a lover of the Adamses as well," Koch said.

The mayor said other dignitaries would be invited to participate in the ceremony; those will be announced after the date for the ceremony is finalized.

"Those will be the two keynotes and then we'll see who is going to come from the elected world. I think it will be well-attended; I've got to believe that, so who makes time to get here when the date is chosen, we'll see," Koch said.

"In other words, if the lieutenant governor showed forming arts who hail from Quincy.

"I think we're probably going to go in another direction and we'll probably work in the Ruth Gordons, the Lee Remicks, the folks that went off into becoming actors and actresses or artists - whatever term you want to use," Koch said. "There is a lot of them from Quincy that we could honor."

When the city formally dedicated the Hancock-Adams Common in 2018, author and historian David McCullough was one two keynote speakers along with Gov. Charlie Baker. McCullough - who won the Pulitzer Prize for his 2002 biography of John Adams, which was adapted into an HBO miniseries - died on Aug. 7 at the age of 89.

In the recent interview, Koch said McCullough helped put Quincy on the map with his biography of the second president.

"David McCullough was a national treasure. He was a gem. Amazing historian. Tremendous author," Koch said.

"I heard him at least on four occasions giving a lecture and you always got disappointed when he stopped, when he ended, because you wanted him to keep going - he was so good. Not only was he a great writer, but what a speaker.

"He helped put Quincy on the map with his book on Adams. When you look at the story of that, he was going to do Adams and Jefferson originally and decided to just do Adams based on the research he had done. It's pretty remarkable."

The city will likely honor McCullough in some fashion inside the planned Adams Presidential Center, Koch added.

"What I'm thinking about is with the Adams Presidential Center, that we do something there to honor him, because I think it was his impetus that got us all thinking more about the story of the Adamses and the gift of the Adamses and how we honor them," Koch said. "I think this would be a nice place to do it. How, I don't know."

Scenes From Yesterday

THIS IS A 1947 postcard view of the Conservatory Building at 7 Foster St. in Quincy Center just after it was built. John Lyons, owner of the building, started a music business in 1932 in a small studio in the Adams Building on Hancock Street. The business grew as he added instruction in a wide range of voice, piano, musical instruments and all types of dancing, elocution and baton twirling. The noise bothered other Adams Building tenants so he built this new shop offering instruments for sale, rental and repair. He also sold dancing shoes, costumes and makeup services. And he offered classes in radio announcing, makeup and charm courses. For almost 40 years hundreds of students and customers learned or enhanced a variety of talents thanks to this business which closed in the late 1960s. Today, this building is home to a number of law offices for local attorneys. The Quincy Market parking lot later became the Elm Farm parking lot. It's now owned by Quincy Mutual. The market was on Chestnut Street next to the Strand Theater.

Editor's Note: The Quincy Sun's first office was located on the second floor of the Conservatory Building. The paper's first issue was published 54 years ago - Sept. 26, 1968. A year later, the Sun moved to the defunct Mutual Building above the Kincaide Furniture store at 1601 Hancock St. Today, the building site is where the Walter Hannon Parkway intersects Hancock Street. The Quincy Sun relocated to its present location at 1372 Hancock St. in February, 1975.

6-Ward Plan OKed But Councillor Vows Court Action

Federal Court Judge Andrew Caffery accepted the six-ward plan advanced by Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilaro and approved by the City Council, and then the judge shut off all further debate on the issue that has plagued the city since June.

Thus the preliminary election will be held Nov. 6 and the final election on Dec. 4.

"The judge, in essence, overruled a state statute that would have barred us from redistricting again until 1980," said Ward 3 Councillor Theophilus McLelland III, whose political foothold in Ward 3 was wiped out under the Barilaro plan. (Editor's note: The Barilaro plan put Ward 3 Councillor McLelland in Ward 2 and added portions of Ward 3 to Ward 4 Councillor Albert Barilaro's constituency. McLelland chose to run for Councillor at-Large and lost. Barilaro would lose his Ward 4 seat to newcomer James A. Sheets.)

LIONS CLUB ESTABLISHES CAPT. BRUDNO SCHOLARSHIP

The Quincy Lions Club is establishing a scholarship fund in memory of the late Capt. Edward A. Brudno, former Vietnam POW, who died last June.

A special committee, headed by former School Committee Vice-Chairman James F. McCormick, has been meeting to set up the scholarship.

Capt. Brudno's father, Dr. James Brudno, was a charter member of the Quincy Lions Club.

Capt. Brudno's Air Force Phantom jet was shot down in Oct. 1965. He was released with other POW's in Feb. 1973.

Serving on the scholarship committee with McCormick were Lions Members George Riley, City Auditor Alexander Smith and James Sullivan.

READERS FORUM

City Should Order EVs For Car, Truck Fleet

In June the City Council approved a $3 million bond to fund the purchase of cars and trucks for the city fleet. In remarks that accompanied the vote, several councillors made it clear that the purchases would include a substantial portion of electric vehicles (EVs), which despite a higher up-front cost would save money for the city in the long run owing to reduced costs for maintenance and fuel. Also mentioned were the large environmental benefits that would result from converting to EVs.

So I can only imagine the councillors' dismay when they read, in the Sept. 8 Sun, the city's advertisement inviting bids for the first 21 of the cars and trucks. Not only did it fail to mention that the city would prefer EVs, but many of the models specified on the city website aren't even made in an EV version.

Granted, there's a waiting list for many EVs nowadays, but there's also a waiting list for many gasoline-powered vehicles. A modest proposal, then: Rather than falling back on habit by ordering old-style gas-guzzlers as soon as we encounter a real or imagined obstacle, why not break the pattern by ordering EVs and, if there's going to be a wait, then lease a few gas guzzlers for the six or eight months it will take the new cars and trucks to arrive?

That way we won't be stuck with gas guzzlers - and their toxic air pollution and greenhouse gas emissions - for the next however many years.

Roundball Basketball Camp Wraps Up Weekly Sessions At NQHS, Atlantic M.S.

For the first two weeks in August, the Roundball Basketball Camp took center stage at Atlantic Middle School and North Quincy High School and welcomed more than 100 participants from Quincy and surrounding towns.

This year's camp had a distinct North Quincy Raider flair, as longtime boys' basketball coach Kevin Barrett joined Paul Beston in directing the activities. Working with a group of counselors that featured many current and former Raider players, Barrett and Beston hosted boys and girls ages 7 to 11 from Aug. 1 through Aug. 5. The next week was reserved for players ages 9 to 16.

"We are really pleased with the turnout and thrilled that so many youngsters – experienced players and newcomers alike – had the chance to discover the game or work on their skills," said Barrett, head coach of the Raiders since 2006 and the 2014 Massachusetts Basketball Coaches Association Coach of the Year. He added that the daily program was tailored to all ages and skill levels, with the objective of improving individual fundamentals and proper team play.

Beston, the camp's longtime director, was similarly enthusiastic.

"We had two successful, full sessions and it was great to see the kids get excited about basketball as they enjoyed some meaningful summer recreation," said Beston. All campers were grouped according to age, physical maturity, previous experience, and overall ability, he added, noting that campers were supervised by coaches and counselors who specialize in all areas essential to building a solid basketball foundation.

Barrett and Beston are especially appreciative of three key sponsorships they received this year. Quincy's Uncle Sam Rounseville and his wife, Jean Kenney, funded scholarships to help city residents attend the Roundball Basketball Camp. Jim Dunn of Quincy's Manet Contracting made a similarly gracious donation that Barrett and Beston used for scholarships. Lastly, Prime Energy sponsored T-shirts given out to each camper.

Barrett and Beston are already planning for next summer. Parents or potential sponsors who want to learn more about the camp should contact Barrett (781-985-0476, rkbarratt2002@yahoo.com) or Beston (617-472-1962, bestonpaul@yahoo.com).

Granite Again Named No. 1 Most Charitable Company In Massachusetts $38.9 Million Donated To Mass.-Based Charities In 2021

Granite Telecommunications, a $1.8 billion provider of communications service and technology to multilocation businesses and government agencies, announces it was named the No. 1 most charitable contributor in Massachusetts at the Boston Business Journal's 17th Annual Corporate Citizenship Awards on Sept. 8th.

The recognition marks the 14th straight year that Granite has received the honor and the second time Granite has placed No. 1 on the list. This year, a total of 95 companies were recognized as Top Charitable Contributors, collectively donating $322 million in cash contributions. Granite accounted for $38.9 million of that amount.

"The past couple years have presented companies and communities with many challenges, and the needs have continued to grow," said Carolyn Jones, the Business Journal's publisher and market president. "We are proud to celebrate these organizations who give both money and time to make Boston a stronger and better place for all."

"We are humbled by the opportunity to give back to others at a time when so many have had to overcome a myriad of struggles," said

Granite President and CEO Rob Hale. "To share Granite's growth and financial success with the community and be named the most charitable company in the Commonwealth is a true honor, especially given the difficulties that we have all had to rise above since the pandemic took hold in 2020."

Under the leadership of Rob Hale, who has been repeatedly recognized as one of the most philanthropic people in the United States, Granite has devoted itself to giving back to the community. To support that mission, the company established Granite Gives Back Inc., a 501(c)(3) non-profit charitable organization which Granite uses as a vehicle to identify, plan and fund philanthropic projects. Each week, Granite Gives Back identifies a charitable organization for the Granite team to raise funds on behalf of, and Granite matches the amount dollar-for-dollar. Granite Gives Back also organizes volunteering events which members of Granite's team support using company-sponsored Volunteer Time Off.

No Yeast Zucchini And Cheese Biscuit

By MARIE

Usually when you make any type of biscuit the recipe contains yeast. However, today's recipe is yeast-free and quite easy to prepare.

With zucchini so plentiful right now - abundant from gardens and very fresh at supermarkets and farmers markets - ingredients for these biscuits will be very easy to find.

Directions and Ingredients

Pre-heat oven to 425 degrees; Grease a 9 x 13 baking pan

¾ cup shredded zucchini - once shredded, pat dry with paper towel
2 and ½ cups all-purpose flour
1 teaspoon baking powder

½ cup butter
½ cup shredded cheddar cheese
¼ cup mozzarella cheese
¼ cup parmesan cheese
3 or 4 cherry tomatoes, cut up
2 teaspoons of basil
1 cup 2% milk

Drain the shredded zucchini, pat dry and set aside.

In a bowl mix flour, and baking powder. Cut in butter until mixture is crumbly and stir in cheeses, tomato and basil.

Add the milk and stir until everything is moistened.

Drop by 1/3 cupfuls into a greased 9 x 13 baking pan.

Preheat oven to 425 degrees.

Bake for 25 minutes or until golden brown. Serve warm.

Crack Broccoli

By SUZIE

Here is a recipe even your kids will love! Make sure you use the organic version of the ranch seasoning mix to avoid unnecessary not so good for you ingredients.

Another tip is make sure the almonds do not burn in the oven (just watch them).

I am sure this will be a hit with your family.

It is also great to bring to a pot luck because it tastes just as good sitting out a bit.

CRACK BROCCOLI

1/3 cup olive oil
zest of 1/2 lemon
2 teaspoons lemon juice
1 1/2 teaspoons sea salt (or herbamare seasoned salt)
1/2 teaspoon ground black pepper

1/8 teaspoon red pepper flakes
1 1/2 teaspoons ranch seasoning, dry powder (I use "Simply Organic" brand)
5 cloves garlic, minced
2 1/2 pounds broccoli crowns, washed and chopped or florets picked apart
1/4 cup almonds, raw and sliced
1/3 cup parmesan cheese, grated

Preheat the oven to 450 degrees

In a large mixing bowl, whisk together the olive oil, lemon zest, lemon juice, salt, pepper, red pepper flakes, ranch seasoning, and garlic.

Add broccoli, toss and coat.

Spread on baking sheet and add almonds.

Roast about 10 minutes.

Add parmesan and serve.

Boston Architectural College Students Visit Quarry Museum

The Quincy Quarry & Granite Workers Museum recently welcomed students from Boston Architectural College to the Museum and the Lyons Turning Mill.

Their course for this semester involves studying stone construction along with using stone in landscape design. Museum historian Tom Bonomi conducted a tour of the Lyons Turning Mill along with the history of Quincy's granite industry.

A demonstration of stone finishing and tools used in the finishing of dimensional building stone was explained to the students. The students also split granite blocks using the feather and wedge method and hammering to split granite blocks.

Part of their course this semester is for each student to develop a landscape plan for the Turning Mill grounds. This will include placing historic machinery around the grounds of the Turning Mill and designing walking pathways.

"The museum will receive copies of the 10 to 12 landscape plans that the students generate for their assignment using the Turning Mill as the center of the design proposal," said Museum Director Al Bina.

"This will be of great value to the museum as we move forward with establishing an outdoor walking museum of Quincy's past granite industry."

Social Security Matters Ask Rusty – Surviving Spouse Benefits Explained

By RUSSELL GLOOR
National Social Security Advisor
at the AMAC Foundation, The Non-Profit Arm of the Association of Mature American Citizens

Dear Rusty: If I file at age 63 what percentage does my wife receive if I die? Does this percentage change if I wait to file closer to my full retirement age? And what does my wife receive if I die before I file for my benefits? Signed: Planning Ahead

Dear Planning: When you file for your own Social Security benefit will affect the survivor benefit your wife is entitled to as your widow. If you claim at age 63, her benefit as your widow will be based on your age 63 amount. If you wait longer to claim your own Social Security, your own benefit will be higher and so will your wife's entitlement as your survivor. In other words, your wife's benefit as your widow will be based on the amount you are receiving when you die, and the longer you wait to claim your own Social Security, the higher your wife's survivor entitlement will be.

Exactly how much your wife will get monthly as your widow depends also on her own age when she claims her survivor benefit. If you were to die first, your wife can claim a reduced survivor benefit as early as age 60 but doing so will result in a benefit which is 28.5% lower than it would be if she waits until her own full retirement age (67) to claim. Survivor benefits do not reach maximum until the survivor reaches full retirement age (FRA) and, if claimed before that, the benefit will be reduced by 4.75% for each full year early, to a maximum reduction of 28.5%. So, although your wife's base survivor benefit will be the actual (100%) amount you were receiving when you die, her monthly survivor payment will be reduced if she claims the survivor benefit before her FRA. It is an actuarial reduction of .396% less survivor benefit for each month prior to FRA the survivor benefit is claimed.

If you wait to file for your own benefit but die before you actually start collecting your benefits, your wife's entitlement as your widow will be based upon the amount you were entitled to when you died. She will not lose her survivor benefit – it will be based upon the amount you were entitled to when you died, even though you had not yet claimed. Your wife can also delay claiming her survivor benefit until she reaches her FRA to maximize her benefit as your widow. But there is more to consider.

If your wife is working full time, it is often not prudent (and may not be possible) to collect Social Security benefits before reaching full retirement age. That's because of Social Security's earnings test, which limits how much can be earned while collecting SS benefits before FRA. The earnings limit for 2022 is $19,560 (changes yearly) and if that is exceeded SS will take away benefits equal to $1 for every $2 over the limit. If the limit is significantly exceeded your wife could be temporarily ineligible to get benefits, until her earnings are less, or until she reaches her full retirement age (the earnings limit no longer applies when FRA is reached).

Finally, it's important to note that all Social Security rules are gender-neutral, meaning that the rules apply equally to both spouses. But in any case, a surviving spouse can only get one benefit – either their own or their survivor benefit, whichever is highest.

Quincy Receives $65,000 Grant For Municipal Road Safety

The City of Quincy will receive a $65,000 grant from the Baker-Polito Administration as part of the administration's $10.9 million in federal grant funding to improve road safety across the Commonwealth.

Quincy was among the 186 municipal and state agencies that completed a competitive grant process by submitting plans for improved traffic safety training, equipment, and enforcement. Together, these efforts align with Massachusetts' Annual Highway Safety Plan that describes the state's safety trends and guides improvements for the year ahead.

Quincy's grant will focus on municipal road safety.

"From the time we took office, our administration has prioritized the safety of all residents and visitors who share the use of the Commonwealth's roads," said Gov. Charlie Baker. "Through investments like the ones we are announcing today, we are continuing to work with local partners to strengthen safety for motorists, pedestrians, bicyclists and communities."

"We remain committed to delivering support to local officials who understand the positive effect of sustainable roadway safety," said Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito. "Every tool made possible by (these) grants empowers police to educate the public about our Commonwealth's laws, reduce speeding, renew our commitment to wear seat belts, and properly address all forms of distracted and impaired driving."

"Safe roadways are achieved through strong federal, state, and local partnerships. These grants support our shared goal of reinforcing good driving behavior, deterring impaired and distracted driving, enhancing law enforcement training, and identifying data-driven solutions," said Public Safety and Security Secretary Terrence Reidy. "I commend the Office of Grants and Research for their excellence and ongoing work to deliver vital resources that improve public safety across the Commonwealth."

"This funding will support data-driven efforts to address threats to roadway safety in communities across the Commonwealth," added Kevin Stanton, Executive Director of the Office of Grants and Research.

Help Ease Patient Pain During Sickle Cell Awareness Month

During Sickle Cell Awareness Month in September, the American Red Cross emphasizes the importance of a diverse blood supply to help meet the needs of those with sickle cell disease – the most common inherited blood disorder in the U.S.

Sickle cell disease impacts more than 100,000 people across the country, most of whom are of African descent. Regular blood transfusions are critical to managing extreme pain and life-threatening complications faced by many. Unfortunately, they may develop an immune response against blood from donors that is not closely matched to their own. However, because most individuals who are Black have unique structures on their red blood cells that are not often found in other donor populations, 1 in 3 African American blood donors is a match for people with sickle cell disease.

Seasonal changes can trigger pain crises for those battling sickle cell – possibly increasing the need for lifesaving blood transfusions. As summer ends, book a time to give blood by using the Red Cross Blood Donor App, visiting RedCrossBlood.org or by calling 1-800-RED CROSS (1-800-733-2767). As a thank-you, all who come to give through Sept. 18 will get an exclusive Red Cross T-shirt, while supplies last.

The American Red Cross has scheduled a blood drive in Quincy on Monday, Sept.

26 from 1:30 to 7 p.m. at the Quincy Sons of Italy, 120 Quarry St.

Sickle cell disease distorts soft, round blood cells and turns them hard and crescent-shaped, which can cause severe pain. "When cells harden, they can get caught in blood vessels, potentially leading to stroke and organ failure," said Kelly Isenor, director of communications for the Red Cross of Massachusetts. "Transfusions provide healthy blood cells, un-blocking blood vessels and delivering oxygen, minimizing crises patients with sickle cell may face."

To help ensure patients have the blood products they need, the American Red Cross is working with partners in the Black community to grow the number of blood donors who are Black through the sickle cell initiative, which launched in 2021. In the first year of the initiative, the number of first-time African American blood donors who gave with the Red Cross increased by 60%.

In September and October, the Red Cross launches Joined by Blood, a fall component of the initiative where the Red Cross is teaming up with community organizations, like the National Pan-Hellenic Council and others, to host blood drives and inspire donors who are Black to give blood to support patients with sickle cell disease.

In recent weeks, the executive director of the South Shore YMCA, and other staff members, asked the Quincy Police Department to make frequent checks for parties on their property who have been drinking alcohol and using drugs.

On Sept. 9, Officer Ryan Donnelly was assigned to the Quincy Police Anti-Crime Unit in a plain clothes capacity. At approximately 1 p.m., Officer Donnelly noticed the female defendant sitting under a tree on the McGrath Highway side of the YMCA property. He noticed she had two open cans of Pabst Blue Ribbon beer.

Officer Donnelly exited his unmarked police cruiser. With his department issued badge hanging from his neck, he announced his presence. Officer Donnelly has had several interactions with the female and she knows him to be a Quincy police officer. Officer Donnelly told the female that instead of arresting her for the violation of city ordinance, he would allow her to gather her belongings and leave the area. The female then started to yell and scream.

Officer Donnelly asked her to stop yelling and gather her belongings but she continued to yell "F@#$ you go catch real criminals." Officer Donnelly then told her that she was under arrest. He attempted to place the defendant into handcuffs. As he grabbed her arm, she tensed up, grabbed his wrist, and attempted to pull Officer Donnelly off balance. To stop himself from falling, he placed his left foot in front of him.

While struggling to place the defendant in handcuffs, the female tripped over Officer Donnelly's foot and fell to the ground. Officer Donnelly then fell and landed to the left of her, falling on his knee. He radioed Quincy Police Communications that the defendant was resisting arrest. He was able to get one handcuff on the female's left wrist while she resisted. Officer Dougan then arrived on location and assisted Officer Donnelly.

Once the female was handcuffed, officers stood her up and waited for a cruiser to transport her to the police station.

She started yelling and spitting at officer. She then kicked Officer Dougan in the shin, causing a minor abrasion. Officers asked the female to calm down but she refused. She continued to kick and spit. She was then assisted to the ground where she was placed into a recovery position on her right side. Her feet were held to the ground to prevent her from kicking anyone else. The Quincy Police Prisoner van was requested and arrived on location.

She was transported into the Quincy Police Station to be booked in the usual manner. Once the female was removed, the YMCA executive director came to the scene. She stated that she could hear the female from the YMCA building, which is at least 100 yards away from where this incident happened.

The 45-year-old female from Spear Street in Quincy was charged with the following: violation of a City Ordinance (open container of alcohol), disorderly conduct, assault & battery on a police officer, resisting arrest, and assault & battery dangerous weapon to wit shod foot.

The female was trespassing from YMCA property.
Great work!

serve the public in this new role."

Palmucci has represented Ward 4 on the City Council since 2010 and is the longest-serving member of the council currently. He ran unopposed in the most recent municipal election in 2021 and is in the first year of a two-year term.

If Palmucci were confirmed by the Governor's Council, he would have to resign from his seat on the City Council.

City Solicitor Jim Timmins said that if a ward councillor seat is vacated in the first year of the term, the seat would be filled in a special election. If the vacancy occurs in the second year of the term, the remaining councillors would choose someone to serve the remainder of the term.

Before he was nominated to the seat on the District Court, Palmucci's application was vetted by the Judicial Nominating Commission, the governor's office said.

"Attorney Palmucci's years of experience representing the Commonwealth in several legal roles make him well-suited for this appointment," Baker said in a statement. "I am pleased to submit his nomination to the Governor's Council for their advice and consent."

"Attorney Palmucci possesses a deep knowledge of not just the law, but also the importance of the matters that come before the District Court," added Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito. "If his nomination is confirmed, I am confident that he will serve the judiciary fairly and thoughtfully."

Palmucci is a 2000 graduate of the University of Massachusetts at Amherst and received his juris doctor from the New England School of Law in 2004.

He began his legal career in 2004 working as an assistant district attorney in Plymouth County. In 2006, he joined McGovern and Ganem, PC, as an attorney specializing in motor vehicle insurance fraud, arson, false injury and property loss.

Palmucci was counsel for the state Department of Correction from 2008 to 2010 and in d November 2010 became a special assistant district attorney in Norfolk County, a position he held until 2018. He founded Palmucci Law, PC, in 2011.

Palmucci has volunteered for the Friends of Blue Hills since 2010, served on the board of directors for DOVE from 2013 to 2015, and has served on the Quincy Affordable Housing Trust Committee since 2018.

"We are happy to recognize residents that do their part to keep our city looking beautiful," Koch said. "There are thousands more throughout our city that do a great job year in and year out and I want to thank all of our residents that contribute to the great aesthetic character of Quincy's neighborhoods. Nice properties make for nice neighborhoods; and nice neighborhoods make for a great city."

Folks are encouraged to maintain their properties and the grass border along their sidewalk. Beautification is a team effort and it takes everyone working together to keep Quincy looking cleaner and greener.

"I want to congratulate our winners and all the properties nominated this year," said Commissioner of Natural Resources David Murphy. "There is a lot of time and effort that goes into being recognized and I appreciate everyone that does their part of making our city look great. It was tough to choose just 30 winners based on the number of nominations; there are hundreds of beautiful properties out there, even in a year with such difficult conditions with the heat and drought."

Request For Fuel Storage Permit On Hold

By SCOTT JACKSON

The city's licensing board tabled until further notice an applicant's request for a fuel storage permit to give Fire Department officials more time to review the proposal.

Booster, a company that offers mobile fueling services, went before the Board of License Commissioners on Sept. 13 to seek a fuel storage permit for the premises at 97 East Howard St., which is within the Fore River Shipyard.

Jack Lonergan, a project manager for Booster, said the six-year-old company currently operates in California, Dallas, Philadelphia and Washington. The company has begun to expand to the Boston area, primarily servicing Amazon fleets.

The company is using the site within the shipyard today, Lonergan said, and has nine or ten trucks located there. The company's tankers get fuel at a terminal and then drive to meet their customers before returning to the shipyard, where the vehicles are stored overnight.

Lonergan said about 1,300 aggregate gallons of fuel are stored in the vehicles on site within the shipyard on a typical night. The company was seeking to increase the aggregate limit to 10,000 gallons.

"We're looking to get 10,000 aggregate gallons just in case there was any sort of emergency situation or any sort of supply issue in the area," he said. "There may be a circumstance where we may need to store more gallons on site. We just don't want to run afoul of any regulation."

In addition, Lonergan said he wanted clarification on the regulations concerning how much space is required between the vehicles when they are parked at the shipyard.

Fire Chief Joseph Jackson requested a continuance so he could look further into the matter.

"This is just a very new business, it's a very unusual request, and when we're talking about fuel in excess of 10,000 gallons, there is just a lot of homework I would have to do on this," Jackson said, later adding, "I'm not against the business - I just want to make sure that I'm doing all my due diligence."

At the fire chief's request, the matter was tabled until further notice.

In other business, the licensing board granted a special-use permit and one-day beer and wine license to QUBIC Labs for an event it is planning for Wednesday from 3 to 9 p.m. in Kilroy Square in support of Boston Blockchain Week.

Ian Cain, the co-founder and chairman of QUBIC Labs, likened the event to the South by Southwest Festival.

"[It] will have moderated panel discussions and speakers around the topic of blockchain technology, which is one of the enabling, emerging technologies that QUBIC Labs supports here in the city of Quincy," he said.

The event is expected to draw between 500 and 1,000 guests, Cain added.

In other business on Sept. 13, the board granted a special-use permit and one-day beer and wine license to St. George Albanian Orthodox Cathedral for Albanian community festival planned for Kilroy Square on Sunday, Oct. 2, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The board also tabled until further notice the request of Off the Hook Bar and Grill, 1269 Sea St., for an alteration of its licensed premises.

Quincy College Awarded $750,000 Life Sciences Grant

Quincy College has been awarded a $750,000 Workforce Development Capital grant from the Massachusetts Life Sciences Center (MLSC), funding that will enable the College to further expand its successful biotechnology program that prepares students for meaningful, rewarding careers in one of the state's fastest-growing industries.

In addition, Quincy College will partner with Quincy Public Schools (QPS) on QPS' own $183,700 grant awarded through MLSC's STEM Equipment and Teacher Professional Development program. That funding will support QPS' Pathways for Aspiring Life Scientists (PALS) program that increases high school students' exposure to and experience with new STEM/life sciences concepts.

"Over the past decade, grant funding from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts and the Massachusetts Life Sciences Center has benefited our students and biotechnology and life sciences employers across the region," said Dr. Richard DeCristofaro, president of Quincy College. "And our continuing collaboration with Quincy Public Schools around biotech and life sciences education demonstrates our commitment to growing its STEM curriculum. We're proud to be recognized as a leader in biotechnology education, training and workforce development."

The $750,000 Quincy College grant is part of $12.5 million in MLSC capital funding that is anticipated to serve more than 8,000 students across Massachusetts. The funding is designed for the development and expansion of life sciences education and training programs offered by post-secondary academic institutions and non-profit organizations through capital investment in industry-aligned certificate and degree programs. The college will use its grant for the purchase of advanced processing equipment to train students to grow and maintain cell cultures as well as microscopes, cell lines, bioreactors, gases, testing and filtration systems, quality-control devices and various laboratory reagents and supplies.

The college's biotechnology program prepares students for employment as biomanufacturing technicians in state-of-the-art manufacturing facilities. Students are taught upstream and downstream bioprocessing from tissue culture through product validation while following good manufacturing processes. Students also learn relevant industry lab skills, documentation, and operation of equipment and software. The QPS PALS grant will support equipment and technology upgrades that increase students' access to high-quality STEM education and career readiness and will also expand professional development opportunities for staff. This funding complements previous STEM-related investments designed to strengthen pathways for QPS students to pursue either post-secondary STEM education or develop readiness for life sciences careers.

345 New Apartments OK'd On Centre Street

courtyard. The building will also feature elevated courtyards, one of which will have a pool, for tenants. Other amenities include lounge spaces, a coworking space, and a fitness center.

As part of the project, the developer will rebuild Intervale and Vernon Streets adjacent to the site. That would include a new emergency gate leading to Crown Colony, which abuts the site, from Intervale Street. A driveway across the site would provide direct access between Intervale and Vernon Streets.

A new crossing, including flashing lights, will be added at the intersection of Centre and Intervale Streets, MacKinnon said. The developer will also work with the city to improve drainage infrastructure in the area.

At the conclusion of MacKinnon's presentation, Richard Meade, the chairperson of the Planning Board, credited the developer for working to address concerns raised by various city departments as they vetted the project.

"I would like to congratulate you and your team. You've done a great job in a very short period of time in terms of dotting the I's and crossing your T's, and I think that's important," Meade said. "You've addressed all the issues that have been raised by the city departments, and I think that speaks well for you and your team."

Board member John Kelly said he appreciated that the building would have capacity to add additional electric vehicle charging stations in the future. Kelly also asked MacKinnon if a general contractor had been chosen for the site — MacKinnon said one not been chosen yet — and said Quincy residents would like to work on a project like the Centre Street one.

"Quincy has a lot of men and women in the construction industry. They would love to work on a project of this magnitude in their own city. When you pick the contractor, keep that in mind," Kelly said. "Along with all that nice granite, there is a lot of good, hardworking men and women in the city who would love to work on that job."

MacKinnon responded that his company had a good experience working with local labor on its development at the North Quincy station.

"We look forward to a similar process here," he said.

Two residents spoke during the public hearing on the proposal, one in opposed and the other in favor.

Pat McLean, a Branch Street resident, told the board she was "livid about the magnitude of a monstrous" seven-story building. The residents who live inside the apartments would only be temporary, she added, and wouldn't care about the city or neighborhood.

"Why couldn't the developers give us instead a community, a village, of condo townhouses where people own the property and thus have skin in the game to care about what happens in the neighborhood, care about the appearance of their property, care about the city and its tax rates," McLean said. "The condos would enhance the aesthetics of the neighborhood and be a welcome addition to the whole area, like the Village at Crown Colony, which is a beautiful community with lots of green grass."

John Rodophele, a Grenwood Road resident who spoke in favor of the project, said it is allowable under the city's zoning code for the transit-oriented district.

"Do I like these big, huge buildings? I don't like them, but I do like them in certain places because we need the new growth," Rodophele said. "I actually think this is a good place for this sort of new growth."

Following the public hearing, the Planning Board voted 5-0 to approve the project with conditions set by the Planning Department.

ing, it was determined that it had structural deficiencies and couldn't support an addition.

"We felt the best solution was to take it down... and develop a building, four units, which he requested," Donohue said.

The proposed new building would have a footprint of 1,400 square feet, compared to the current building's footprint of 2,200 square feet, he said. That would increase the setback between the building and the property on the right-hand side, as viewed from Sea Street, and the setback in front of the building.

Parking for nine vehicles would be provided in the rear of the property. Access to the parking area would be via Hull Street; cars headed to and from the property would travel over an easement behind two houses to get to the parking area.

"The parking in the rear is perfect for a residential-type use whereas it's not good for retail or commercial use."

New Dunkin' Donuts Proposed On Franklin Street

By SCOTT JACKSON

To stop vehicles from queuing onto the road, the owner of the Dunkin' Donuts on Franklin Street is proposing to build a new store that would feature a longer drive-through line.

The applicant, Bike Realty LLC, presented plans for the new store to the Planning Board on Sept. 14.

The applicant is seeking to construct the new store on the property at 109 Franklin St. while the existing Dunkin' Donuts next door at 95 Franklin St. would be converted to a different commercial use, which has not yet been determined. Those parcels of land contain 40,400 square feet of land and are zoned Business B.

To make way for the new store at 109 Franklin St., a multi-family home and a commercial building with three storefronts would be demolished. The commercial building had been home to Quincy Creamery and Edmea's Tailoring, both of which closed in recent weeks; the third business, Quincy Hungry Tummy, moved elsewhere on Franklin Street.

Patrick Foley, the attorney who represented the applicant at the hearing, said the new store was being proposed to stop vehicles in the drive-through line from queuing up onto Franklin Street.

"Within the last couple of years, they've seen what's going on out front, and they've seen the traffic and they know something needs to be done," Foley said. "That's why we're here tonight."

The new drive-through lane would begin at the same curb cut where vehicles exit Franklin Street to get into the Dunkin' Donuts today. It would then continue around the back of the property and exit roughly where the multi-family home at 109 Franklin St. is presently located. The store would have two menus at which customers in the drive-through line could place their order; the second menu would be in use during peak periods.

The new Dunkin' Donuts would have two drive-through windows, like the one on Washington Street does. Customers would pay at the first window and most would be able to get their food and drinks there. Those with larger orders — which could mean multiple sandwiches or espresso drinks, for example — would pay at the first window and then pull up to the second window to wait for their order.

The new drive-through line would have room for 27 vehicles to queue up between the entrance to the site on Franklin Street and the first window, according to project engineer Zach Poisson; there would be enough space for 18 vehicles between the entrance and ordering point.

Currently, he said there is enough room to accommodate seven or eight vehicles between the entrance on Franklin Street and the drive-through window.

The new store would also have seating inside for 16 customers. Parking would be provided in the area between the old store and the new one, with room for 23 total spaces. Vehicles would be able to pull in and out of the parking lot without going through the drive-through lane.

The Planning Board did not vote on the proposal at the Sept. 14 meeting and will take up the matter again on Oct. 12. The project also requires approval from the city's historic commission because of the site's proximity to the birthplaces of John and John Quincy Adams.

Developer May Redraw Sea Street Proposal

By SCOTT JACKSON

The applicant seeking to build a four-unit residential building on Sea Street in Houghs Neck may tweak the proposal to include a commercial component following a public hearing on the plan.

The applicant, Sea Street Properties LLC, went before the Zoning Board of Appeals on Sept. 13 seeking permission to construct the four-unit building at 1092 Sea St. The 7,329-square-foot site is presently home to a commercial building that includes the Hough Many Scoops ice cream shop. The lot is zoned Business B but an ordinance pending before the City Council would rezone it and other parcels in the area to Residence A.

Edward Fleming, the applicant's attorney, said the site is no longer suitable for commercial use.

"Although there are some businesses along the Sea Street corridor, this particular location is no longer suited for a commercial use. It's essentially surrounded on both sides," by residential properties, he said.

At the outset of the applicant's presentation, Martin Aikens, the chairperson of the Zoning Board Appeals, said he would not vote in favor of the proposal unless it included a commercial component.

"I do not want to lose commercial space in Houghs Neck. There's not enough there. They're almost all gone," Aikens said. "There is no residence I would be in favor of without commercial space."

Fleming responded that his client, Ervis Topalli, has attempted to lease the site to businesses but has been unable to do so. Aikens replied that businesses have attempted to rent the site, but the owner, "wants too much money for what's available."

Brian Donohue, the applicant's architect, said the property owner initially wanted to add an addition onto the existing building and convert it to residential. After evaluating the build-

Ask Barbara Graceffa: More Top Decorating Tips

In my last column, I shared my top five decorating tips: plan, buy the best you can afford, buy what you love, compromise when necessary, and audition items in your home.

Tip #6: Beware of trends. By nature, they come and go. Some stay longer than others (anyone else sick of grey paint?). And it is expensive to keep changing your décor. If you like trendy items, stick to accessories.

Tip #7: Plan for comfortable furniture placement. Unless your room is small, don't assume the only layout for your furniture is pushed up against the wall. Try placing furniture on an angle and place the rug accordingly.

Don't crowd your furniture. Allow sufficient room between pieces so you can easily walk around the room - this might mean that you cannot fit a coffee table or end table as you had planned. On the other hand, in a large room, create conversation areas less than eight feet apart. Measure everything and plot it out on graph paper before you move the heavy furniture.

Tip #8: Avoid the "floating rug" mistake. Many people buy areas rugs that are too small. At least the front feet of all the furniture should be on the rug. Otherwise, layer a few smaller rugs together for a designer look.

Tip #9: Buy yourself a color wheel (or download an app). Analogous colors are next to each other on the wheel and are "good neighbors" like yellows and oranges or blues and violets, for example. Complementary colors are opposite each other and, well, complement each other nicely; so be confident that a pale lavender will play well with a lemon chiffon color. Learn about value or intensity and discover that you should pair a bright raspberry with a bright turquoise, not a pale blue. The color wheel is a gem of information; take it for a spin!

Tip #10: Design is in the details. Accessories make a beautiful home. Art, framed photos, pillows, trays, candles, mirrors, plants, clocks, couch throws, and other smaller, easily-changeable accessories not only add personality but pizzazz as well.

(P.S. I finished the preface (where I decided to include these top ten tips), table of contents, and first two chapters of my decorating book. I'll keep you posted so it is my incentive to keep going!)

Tips: Break These Bad Habits When Using Credit

National nonprofit credit counseling agency Take Charge America shares tips to avoid derailing financial goals

Credit card use has surged across the country as Americans face higher prices in recent months. With more individuals turning to credit for everyday purchases, the potential grows to develop bad habits that can negatively impact their finances.

"Credit has become an increasingly necessary tool to participate in today's financial world," said Amy Maliga, a financial educator with Take Charge America, a nonprofit credit counseling and debt management agency. "That's why it's important for individuals to use credit responsibly so they don't derail their life and money goals."

Maliga breaks down four bad habits to avoid when using credit:

- Paying the minimum. It may be easier, but only paying the minimum payment on your credit card each month is a habit that will keep you in debt. This also leads you to paying way more in interest than necessary. Instead, work to pay off your balance in full every month to avoid finance charges.

- Credit churning. This is the process of opening multiple credit cards to collect new customer bonuses like miles and cash back. The practice can have potentially disastrous effects on your credit score and ability to get new credit when you really need it. Opening several accounts in succession is often seen as a red flag. Also, the more credit cards you have, the greater risk of missing payments. Instead, use one or two main cards regularly to build and maintain good credit.

- Buy now pay later. No, BNPL isn't a credit card in the traditional sense. But these popular services are a form of credit that come with financial risks including potential late fees, a temptation to spend more and no consumer protections. Instead of using BNPL, only buy items you can afford at the time of purchase.

Halloween Costumes Needed

Interfaith Social Services Collecting Halloween Costumes For Local Children In Need

Interfaith Social Services is seeking donations of new Halloween costumes for their annual Halloween Costume Drive. In October, the organization will distribute hundreds of costumes to the children served through their food pantry.

"After having to scale back this program for the past two years due to the pandemic, we're excited to start up the Halloween Costume Drive again," said Interfaith's Executive Director Rick Doane. "It's one of our favorite seasonal programs. Donors love selecting and purchasing costumes for the Drive and the kids get so incredibly excited when they get to pick out any costume they want on giveaway day."

Interfaith Social Services operates one of Greater Boston's largest emergency food pantries, a mental health counseling center, Thrift Shop and homelessness prevention program. This year the organization is celebrating seventy-five years of serving local families. Since 1947, Interfaith Social Services has been a safety net for thousands of children and individuals from the South Shore who are struggling to make ends meet.

Interfaith's food pantry conducts several seasonal initiatives throughout the year aimed at bringing joy to children who may be growing up in difficult situations. During the Halloween Costume Drive, generous individuals and businesses donate hundreds of new Halloween costumes. In mid-October, client families are invited to a special day of "shopping" where their children can choose a costume.

"Helping families in need and serving children has been a centerpiece of Interfaith's mission since we were founded," said Doane. "We are so grateful for all the members of our community who make events like this possible."

Interfaith Social Services needs your help to ensure that they have enough costumes to provide one for every child aged 12 and under. Donations of new costumes and accessories can be dropped off at their building, located at 105 Adams St., Quincy, Monday-Friday, 12:30-3:30 p.m., and until 7 p.m. on Tuesdays.

Costumes can also be purchased from an online Amazon Wish List (<https://amzn.to/3LedMvk>) and shipped directly to Interfaith. Monetary donations are also welcome. More information about both options can be found at <http://interfaithsocialservices.org/halloween>.

Developer May Redraw Sea Street Project Proposal

cial-type use," Fleming said. "There are residents there. A stream of continuous cars coming to a retail-type use during busy hours is not necessarily the best reuse of the site."

Speaking at the public hearing, Ward 1 Councillor David McCarthy said he would like to see the plans redrawn to keep a commercial use on site.

"I would love to see us go back to the drawing board and kick it around a little more," he said. "I'm kind of leaning towards, hoping, that we could design something where we could still have commercial in the front and some type of residential, maybe two units or three units, with the parking in the back."

Councillor Anne Mahoney said the proposal was too big and should be redrawn.

"I agree with Councillor McCarthy on this, I think this needs to go back to the drawing board," she said. "It's way too big. It's enormous. And, it would be nice if we could keep something commercial there."

David Jacobs, who owns a property on Charles Street, said the building on site today is old, but he had concerns about the proposal presented to the board. Jacobs said he would like to see a commercial use at street level.

"I would much rather see that space stay commercial," he said. "I'm keeping an open mind about this project. I just think it can be better."

Following the public comments, Aikens reiterated that he was opposed to the plans as presented. Board member John Himel added that it would be a "shame to lose that much more commercial space in the city."

After those comments, Fleming sought a continuance so that the applicant could look into concerns raised at the hearing.

"I've heard the board's concerns, I've heard the neighbors' concerns, I'll talk to my client about maybe utilizing the first floor for commercial space," he said.

The hearing on the matter was then continued to Nov. 15.

In other business during the meeting on Sept. 13 the Zoning Board of Appeals unanimously rejected a request to revoke a permit granted for the premises at 77 Ocean Ave. in Squantum.

Attorney Jocelyn Campbell said her clients, James and Sheila LaFleur of 73 Ocean Ave., were seeking the revocation of the foundation permit issued for the property next door at 77 Ocean Ave. because it does not have any frontage on a constructed street.

"We have a public way that turns into a private way that is only 16 feet wide at its widest. Ocean Avenue goes in front of the LaFleurs' house and then stops, and then there is overgrown area and there is nothing after that," Campbell said. "There is actually no road in front of the lot for the proposed 77 Ocean Ave."

Campbell said a court case regarding a property in the town of Lexington supports her clients' position. In that case, Campbell said the court ruled that if frontage is to be achieved, the road must actually be constructed rather than just depicted on a plan.

"You can't drive on a plan," she said. "We have a lot here that is on an unconstructed road."

Jay Duca, the city's director of inspectional services, wrote a letter to the board explaining how the city of Quincy defines the term "frontage" and how it is measured. Duca said the property at 77 Ocean Ave. meets that requirement.

"Ocean Ave. is a way laid out by the city many years ago that serves approximately 23 homes. The lot at 77 Ocean Avenue has the required frontage and the project site plan depicts a 20-foot access drive to the lot, which will provide both legal and physical vehicular access," Duca wrote, noting state code requires a 20-foot width for emergency access.

Board member Charles O'Brien asked Campbell to explain the different widths given for the access road. Campbell said her client measured the road and found it was 16 feet wide at its widest point. O'Brien responded that streets are not always built to the full width of the right of way.

"As an attorney, you know roads are not always built to the limits. If it's 16 feet of pavement, it doesn't mean it's not a 20-foot layout there," O'Brien said.

Campbell replied that the road in front of 77 Ocean Ave. has not been built, to which O'Brien responded "it doesn't matter" because the right of way is 20 feet wide.

Before voting to uphold the permit, Aikens, the board's chairperson, said nearby residents should take pictures of their homes in case the work causes any damage.

"If I lived anywhere around that, I would take pictures...in case something cracks," he said.

After the vote to uphold the permit, one resident interrupted the meeting to say he would take the board to court over the decision.

In other business on Sept. 13, the board continued until Oct. 11 the request of Carl Johnson III for a variance to construct four townhouse units at 12-14 Mill St. in Quincy Point. Following public comments, board members said they would prefer to see a three-unit proposal for the site.

In additional business on Sept. 13, the board continued until Nov. 15 the request of attorney Patrick Foley for variances to construct a new, two-family townhouse-style home at 49 Shea St. in Quincy Point. The continuance was granted so the applicant could redraw the proposal. Several residents voiced their opposition to the project as proposed, as did Mahoney and Ward 2 Councillor Anthony Andronico.

MA Residents To Get Additional Tax Refunds Starting In November

Following the State Auditor's certification Sept. 15th that Fiscal Year 2022 (FY22) net state tax revenues exceeded allowable revenues per Chapter 62F by $2.941 billion, the Baker-Polito Administration has announced details regarding the return of this excess revenue to taxpayers.

"Stronger-than expected state tax revenues have led to a major surplus for Fiscal Year 2022, and we are pleased to be able to return nearly $3 billion in excess revenue to the taxpayers," said Gov. Charlie Baker. "With families facing continued pressure from high prices and inflation, these returns will provide some needed relief. Even with nearly $3 billion going back to taxpayers, significant state and federal resources remain, and we look forward to working with the Legislature to invest this funding into our economy, communities and families."

"Strong economic growth throughout our Commonwealth, combined with careful management of state tax dollars, has resulted in a significant surplus this past fiscal year," said Lt. Gov. Karyn Polito. "In the coming months, our administration will work diligently to distribute these funds back to taxpayers, and we look forward to working with the Legislature to invest additional surplus dollars in local economies across our state."

In accordance with the statute, the $2.941 billion will be returned to eligible taxpayers by the Department of Revenue in proportion to personal income tax liability in Massachusetts incurred by taxpayers in the immediately preceding taxable year – Tax Year 2021. In general, eligible taxpayers will receive a credit in the form of a refund that is approximately 13% of their Massachusetts Tax Year 2021 personal income tax liability. This percentage is a preliminary estimate and will be finalized in late October, after all 2021 tax returns are filed. To be eligible, individuals must have filed a 2021 state tax return on or before October 17, 2022. An individual's credit may be reduced due to refund intercepts, including for unpaid taxes, unpaid child support, and certain other debts.

Individuals eligible for a refund will receive it automatically as a check sent through the mail or through direct deposit. Distribution of refunds is expected to begin in November.

"While the exceptionally high tax collections we saw in FY22 are a testament to the strength and resilience of the Massachusetts economy, we are pleased to be in a position to return a substantial portion of this revenue back to taxpayers," said Administration and Finance Secretary Michael J. Heffernan. "With many feeling the strain of rising prices, these refunds will be a welcome source of relief for more than three million hardworking individuals across the state, and we look forward to executing on the delivery of the refunds in the coming months."

In total, $41.812 billion was collected in FY22, representing overall revenue growth of more than 20% above Fiscal Year 2021. After accounting for the Chapter 62F refunds and the recently filed $840 million final FY22 supplemental budget, a surplus of $1.5 billion remains available to support permanent tax relief measures and other critical investments pending in the FORWARD/economic development bill, in combination with $2.2 billion in remaining American Rescue Plan Act funds.

Additional information about Chapter 62F taxpayer refunds, including Frequently Asked Questions and a refund estimator, is available at www.mass.gov/62frefunds. This website will be updated as additional information becomes available in the coming months. A call center is available to answer questions about 62F refunds at 877-677-9727 and is open Monday through Friday, 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The call center will not be able to provide exact refund amounts – however, the estimator on the FAQs page can help individuals calculate a preliminary estimate.

Chapter 62F is a Massachusetts law enacted by voters in 1986 via a ballot question that requires the Department of Revenue to issue a credit to taxpayers if total tax revenues in a given fiscal year exceed an annual cap tied to wage and salary growth in the Commonwealth.

The law requires that the Department of Revenue submit a report to the State Auditor on the net state tax revenues and the allowable state tax revenues for each fiscal year by Sept. 1st. The State Auditor then makes the determination of whether net state tax revenues exceed allowable state tax revenues – and, if so, by what amount – on or before the third Tuesday of September. View the State Auditor's report for Fiscal Year 2022.

The Chapter 62F process has been triggered once before, in 1987.

Mahoney Seeks Update On City Projects

Speaking at the Sept. 12 meeting, Mahoney said the city's taxpayers want regular and timely updates on the projects the city is undertaking.

"We have bonded millions of dollars of money for these projects, but we don't know where they stand or what's happening with them. There's been many questions that have been raised to me and I'm sure the other councillors," she said.

"The taxpayers are looking to have regular and timely updates on these types of projects to find out what's happening. The ones that are happening, what the progress is, what the status is and when these are going to be completed. Those that are not, where they stand and why they haven't and what's going to happen, and more importantly, what happens to those bonds."

Mayor Thomas Koch, when asked about the resolution in an interview the following day, said his administration would work to provide the council with those updates.

"I don't need a resolve to do that. Quite frankly, in my years with the City Council, whoever's committee the project was in would hold a committee meeting and do an update," said Koch, who was the executive secretary to then Mayor James Sheets.

"I'd be happy to do that at any time for the City Council. I think it's important the public hears the progress that we're making. I'd do that every week if they'd like, because we've made a ton of progress."

While the resolution does not reference any particular project, Mahoney referred to the renovations at 74 Greenleaf St. and the Houghs Neck Maritime Center in her comments during the meeting. She had introduced a resolution seeking an update on the former in March.

City councillors in 2017 approved Koch's request to purchase and renovate the home at 74 Greenleaf St. for a total of $775,000; during that same evening, councillors also approved making the home at 50 Saville Ave available for disposition. The city planned to convert the house at 74 Greenleaf St. into the administrative offices for the Public Buildings Department.

Conceptual plans for the new Houghs Neck Maritime Center were first unveiled in 2017, the same year councillors set aside funds to buy three homes in the vicinity of the building's parking lot.

The former maritime center building has since been torn down and a new boat ramp installed in its place. That boat ramp opened in 2020.

Koch said the work at 74 Greenleaf St. was "just about finished" and the Public Buildings Department would soon be moving in.

"Some of the admin (for public buildings) is going in there. That's just about finished," Koch said.

"Keep in mind, that was a two-fold project. One was to preserve that beautiful building...if you drive by, the outside is completed, painted, the windows are in. It really looks handsome. Then the second is to make good use of it, which is the admin from Public Buildings, which we would then get out of that Saville Hall area and decide what we're going to do with those properties.

"I think it's any day now, they're going to move in there."

In the future, the city could look to sell 74 Greenleaf St., Koch added, but would do so with a deed restriction in place to stop the site from being redeveloped.

"The idea there is over time, if Public Buildings ends up somewhere else, the city could perhaps sell that but put a deed restriction so it could not be torn down, it could not be used for multi housing," he said. "That's the stuff I think people get upset about. You look at that apartment building nearby from that – it was probably built in the '60s or '70s – it seems out of place because it's all single-family homes. So that would be the goal ultimately if we did leave there, keep it from being torn down and another apartment building built."

When asked about the maritime center, the mayor said he would have to check with the project team.

"I'm going to have to check in with my team on that one," he said. "The seawall work was done. The ramp was done. There was still negotiation going on with one homeowner for the final piece of property that would make it a better project."

Latest Unclaimed Property Listing Released By State

Massachusetts State Treasurer Deborah B. Goldberg announced Sept. 16 the latest grouping of names that have been added to the state's list of unclaimed property owners. Over 51,000 new properties worth millions of dollars are owed to individuals and businesses throughout the Commonwealth.

"So many people do not know they have unclaimed property waiting for them," Goldberg said. "It is our goal to help return these funds to the rightful owners. Claiming property is fast, easy, and free, so visit FindMassMoney.com or call our office to see if you have anything waiting for you."

The Unclaimed Property Division currently holds over $3.4 billion in unclaimed property. Unclaimed property includes forgotten savings and checking accounts, uncashed checks, insurance policy proceeds, stocks, dividends, and the contents of unattended safe deposit boxes. Most accounts are considered abandoned and are turned over to the state after three years of inactivity. Last year, Treasury processed over 122,000 claims and returned over $163 million in property to its rightful owners.

This newly released list includes only individuals and businesses with unclaimed property over $100. Treasurer Goldberg urges all citizens to check the comprehensive list for all amounts at www.findmassmoney.com or call the live call center at 888-344-MASS (6277).

The Treasury releases an updated list of unclaimed property assets every six months as the new accounts are turned over to the Commonwealth. There is no time limit for a person to claim this property and, in many cases, claimants will receive interest.

Feds: It's Now Nickerson Rock; Koch: City Keeping It Squaw Rock

The Interior changed the name of Squaw Rock to Nickerson Rock earlier in September, part of an effort by Interior Secretary Deb Haaland rename more than 600 geographic features around the country that include the term "squaw."

The word traces its origins back to an Algonquian word that originally meant "woman." The word, however, "has historically been used as an offensive ethnic, racial and sexist slur, particularly for Indigenous women," the Interior Department said.

"I feel a deep obligation to use my platform to ensure that our public lands and waters are accessible and welcoming. That starts with removing racist and derogatory names that have graced federal locations for far too long," said Haaland, who is a member of the Laguna Pueblo tribe.

In a recent interview, Koch said the city will continue to use the name Squaw Rock to refer to the city-owned landmark, based on conversations he has had with local tribal leaders.

"As far as the city of Quincy goes, it's staying Squaw Rock. The feds can do what they want on their maps, but the fed doesn't own the property, nor do they maintain the property," Koch said.

"In my discussion with the Massachusetts tribe reps, they don't want to see it changed. If they were concerned about it, I would then listen to them, but I'm not going to listen to a bureaucrat out of Washington make these kind of decisions when they're not in tune."

"As the tribe described to me, when the term 'squaw' is used on its own, it's interpreted...not in a positive way. But, when it's attached to a name, they say it's perfectly fine. I had asked them about that when this thing first broke and they said, no, don't change that."

"That's sacred property to them. That, the [Moswetuset] hummock and the spot down at Broad Meadows, the new park that was created down there at the waterfront," Koch added, referring to Passanageset Park. "Those are the three sacred lands to them historically, so we meet on a regular basis and from their perspective, they told me not to change the name."

MBTA 'Making Good Progress,' Koch Says

By SCOTT JACKSON

A member of the MBTA's governing board, Mayor Thomas Koch said the T is 'making good progress' while adding that the transit agency recognizes it needs to do a better job.

Koch was named to the seven-member MBTA Board of Directors last year, filling the seat on the board set aside for the MBTA Advisory Board, which includes the chief elected official of the 176 cities and towns the T serves. Separately, Koch serves on the board of directors for the Massachusetts Department of Transportation.

The Federal Transit Administration in August issued a 90-page report on the MBTA and the state Department of Public Utilities, the state agency tasked with oversight of the T. The FTA's report included 24 separate findings along with dozens of required actions to address those findings.

When asked about the report in a recent interview, Koch said leadership of the MBTA has embraced most of it and understands the T needs to do a better job. Koch also credited Gov. Charlie Baker for working to improve the MBTA during his time in office.

"I think for the most part, the whole MBTA, the authority, has embraced most of that report. I don't think there was anything crazily new that came out of that that people were not aware of," Koch said.

"The T - I've said it before, I'll say it again - for a long time the T was neglected on the capital side, so you have all these systemic failures happening that are the result of decades of neglect. Add to that, it's a big agency, trying to fill positions, keep jobs. We're in an economy right now where trying to fill jobs everywhere is a bit of a challenge. So that continues to be an issue and I know that was one of the issues that the feds pointed out.

"I think everybody wants an MBTA that is safe and reliable for people to use each and every day, and I think we're making good progress. I've said it publicly, this governor stepped up, took the bull by the horns - a sense of responsibility to do something with it. I didn't hear governors before that do that - maybe Dukakis way back when, but certainly not in recent decades.

"It's a huge system and everything was old and neglected. I remember arguing ten years ago with other mayors. The mayor of Somerville at the time was pushing for expansion on the Green Line. I said, 'how can we expand when we can't maintain what we have?'"

"I think there's a recognition now that we've got to do a better job and the processes have been put in place, the funding has been put into place. I think we're months away from really turning the corner, but we're making progress."

When asked if he anticipates any forthcoming changes in MBTA operations, Koch said the state's next governor would have a say in that.

"I think the new governor, whoever comes in, I'm sure they're going to have some thoughts and may have some recommendations about the board, the leadership, the management team," he said. "Who knows?"

MBTA officials in August announced plans to close the Orange Line, the T's second busiest subway line, for 30 days so that repairs could be made along the line. The work would otherwise take five years to complete, T officials have said.

When Koch spoke to The Sun last week, he said work on the Orange Line - which resumed service Monday - had been going well.

"I think it's been going very well," he said.

"I know I spoke at the board meeting when they announced it that day publicly, that the closure of Wollaston station, there was a certain public official and a number of people that were predicting a complete disaster and that went as smooth as silk. People were thrilled. The buses were dependable, they were clean, they were comfortable. By doing that, they saved three years on construction and millions of dollars on the project.

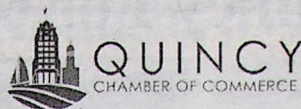

"That's a much smaller version of what they're doing with the Orange Line, but when you're doing track work, you have to shut the tracks down after they close down; there is a safety shutdown period. What do you got, two hours, to actually do work - then you've got to break down again to make them safe again to open up again. You can't get any work done that way.

"I think this will produce result in a much more efficient time frame. Once it reopens and it's running smoothly, I think people will appreciate it. In fact, the stuff I've seen on the news, the public seems happy with the bus transportation they're getting. It's been dependable."

In the same interview, Koch said he could not speak about potential closures on the Red Line, which serves Quincy and has the highest ridership of any MBTA subway line.

"I know there's a lot of discussions going on, a lot of engineering happening. I can't say anything right now about disruptions on the Red Line," he said.

"I hope if disruptions occur, they are going to be planned disruptions where we're making improvements, not breakdowns. I'm certainly anxious about getting the new cars in place, which have been on order for a long time. That's been frustrating for the public as well and I share that frustration, but again, I think we're making progress."

AAA: MA Gas Prices Down 12 Cents; Average $3.68 Per Gallon

The average gas price in Massachusetts is down 12 cents from last week ($3.80), averaging $3.68 per gallon, according to a survey by AAA Northeast.

Monday's price is 52 cents lower than a month ago ($4.20), and 58 cents higher than Sept. 19, 2021 ($3.10). Massachusetts' average gas price is 1 cent higher than the national average.

"All streaks have to end at some point, and the national average for a gallon of gas has fallen $1.34 since its peak in mid-June," said Mary Maguire, AAA Northeast director of Public and Government Affairs. "Prices continue to fall locally, but there are big factors tugging on global oil prices - war, COVID, economic recession, and hurricane season. All this uncertainty could push oil prices higher, likely resulting in slightly higher pump prices."

AAA Northeast's September 19 survey of fuel prices found the current national average to be 4 cents lower than last week ($3.71), averaging $3.67 a gallon. Monday's national average price is 24 cents lower than a month ago ($3.91), and 48 cents higher than this day last year ($3.19).

NQ Downs Quincy For 6th Straight Win In Volleyball

By TOM JOYCE

Down early, the North Quincy High girls' volleyball team came back on Monday night.

After dropping the first set, the Raiders took the next three in a row against their in-city rival, the Quincy Presidents at QHS. The Raiders won the match 3-1. With the win, the Raiders improved to 6-0 on the season. With the loss, the Presidents fell to 4-2 overall.

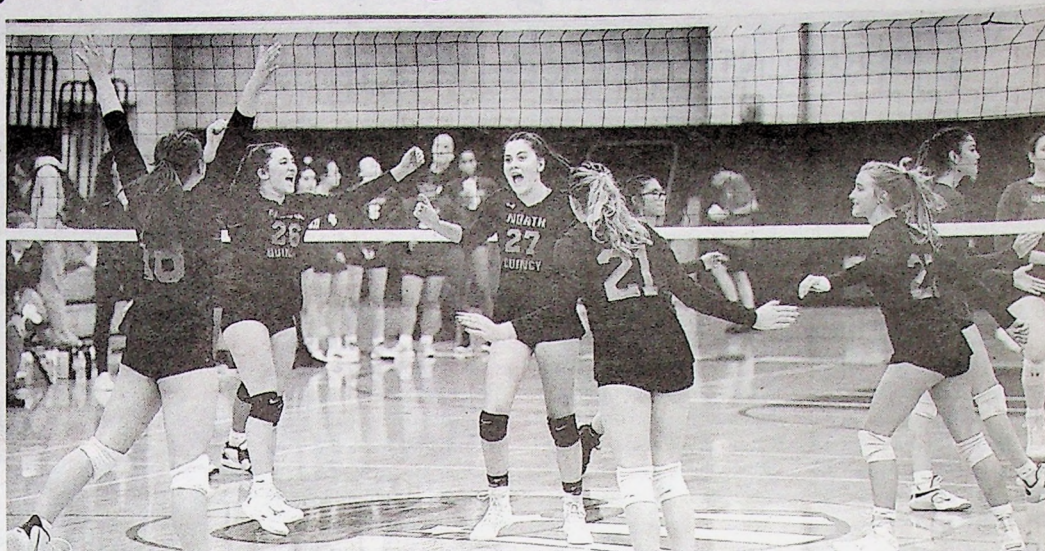

"I was very proud of the way that they came back and really showed our true color," Raiders head coach Caitlin Plaskasovitis said.

"We were just off in the first game. We were playing scared, and halfway through the second game, we kind of just turned it around and put the pedal to the metal and didn't hit the brakes.

"Quincy is a great team, but I think as soon as we took the momentum in that second game, it was hard to slow us down," she added.

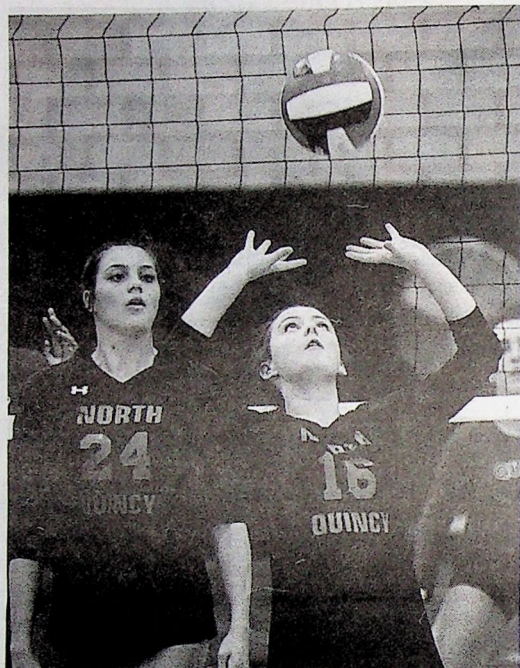

The Presidents had a strong showing in the first set and won it 25-18.

Senior middle hitter Bridget Hoare tied it at 11 apiece and gave the team a 12-11 lead with an ace. While the Raiders would

The Raiders pulled within a point 17-16, but a penalty against them helped spark a 3-0 run that put the Presidents up 20-16.

Senior defensive specialist Tiffany Le had an ace and Phu had a kill in that stretch. The Raiders were unable to make a comeback in this set; Hoare capped it off with a spike to make it 25-18 Presidents.

hitter Autumn O'Campos capped off the set; the Raiders won it 25-22.

After that, the Raiders had two strong performances in the third and fourth sets, respectively. While the Presidents took a 4-2 lead in the third set thanks to a kill from sophomore middle hitter Destiny Francis, the Raiders responded. The team took a 7-6 lead thanks to an ace from junior setter/right-side hitter Elle Blahut.

Up 8-7, the Raiders pulled away thanks to a 7-0 run. The Raiders got strong serving from junior outside hitter Brooklyn Rizzo in this stretch. At one point, she had three consecutive aces; she finished the match with five aces.

The Raiders also received strong serving from senior outside hitter and captain Jennifer Lee. She capped off the third set with three straight aces; the Raiders won it 25-10. She had a team-high six aces in the match.

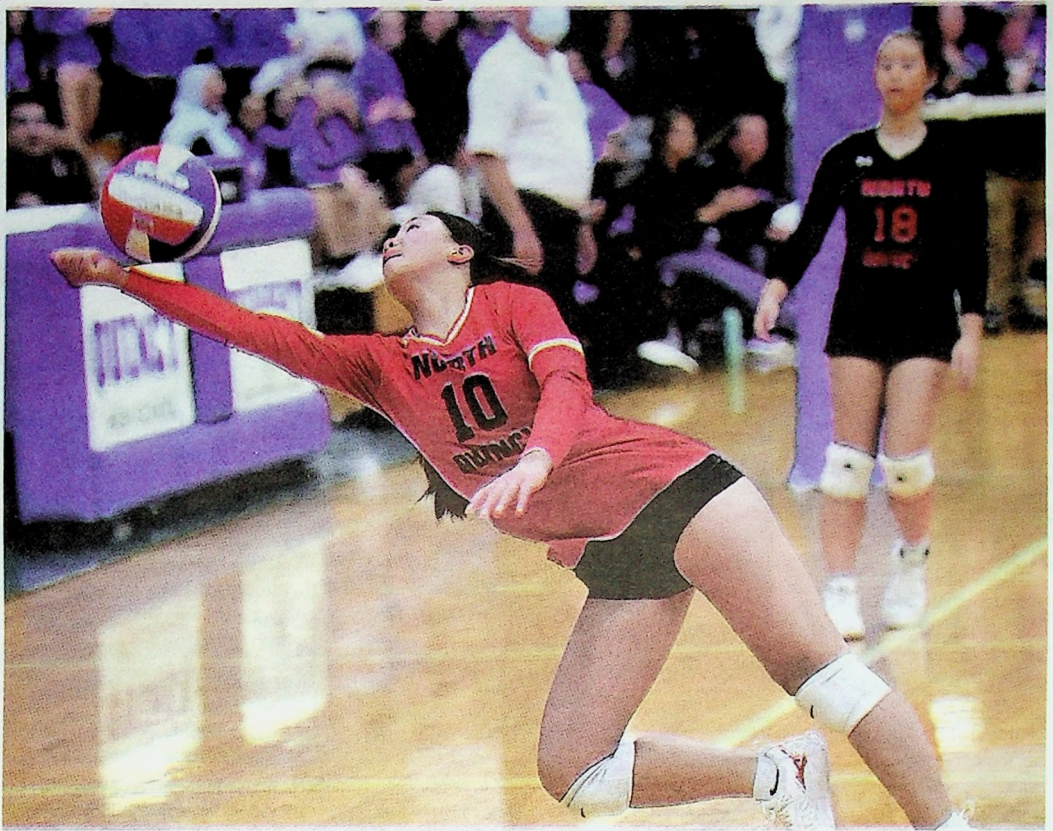

"We put the pressure on when it came to the serve and sided out quickly," Plaskasovitis said. "We were looking across the net and seeing where our best serves were."

The Raiders were also sharp in the fourth and final set of the match.

A kill from senior captain and right-side hitter Chika Akukwe gave the Raiders its first point of the set and three straight aces from Lee put them up 4-0. The Raiders kept this momentum going and took a 10-3 lead thanks to a kill from sophomore setter/right-side hitter Sadie Johnston; she also had the game-ended kill to give the Raiders a 25-7 edge.

North Quincy Blanks Quincy In Girls' Soccer, 4-0

Jackie Manning Scores Twice In Raiders' Win

By TOM JOYCE

The North Quincy High girls' soccer team had its best offensive showing to date against its in-city rival last week.

The Raiders shined on the attack against the Quincy Presidents at Veterans' Memorial Stadium last Saturday night. The Raiders won this one 4-0 and improved to 2-3-0 on the season. With the loss, the Presidents fell to 1-2-0 on the season.

It didn't take the Raiders long to get ahead in this one. And when they did, they never relinquished the lead.

Freshman forward/midfielder Jackie Manning shined for the Raiders early in the contest. She put up a pair of goals in the first 15 minutes to give her team a 2-0 lead. As of the start of this week, she had scored a team-high four goals on the season.

Manning's first goal against the Presidents came at the 10-minute mark. She put up a shot from the right side of the field over the head of the opposing goalkeeper; the goalkeeper got a hand on the ball, but couldn't make the stop. The ball then rolled into the net for a goal.

And about five minutes later, she struck again. Manning found herself on a fast break and tapped the ball left past the opposing goalkeeper rushing towards her in hopes of making the stop. Senior defender Caitlin Cornican helped set up this goal with a precise pass to Manning. It was one of her two assists in the bout.

After that, neither team scored again in the first half. However, the Raiders weren't done adding insurance goals to their lead.

At the 56-minute mark, the Raiders added yet another goal. This time, senior defender and captain Mad-die Power scored. It was her first goal of the season. She launched the ball over the head of the opposing goalkeeper on a shot she took from around the 23-yard line.

Plus, with under seven minutes to go in the contest, the Raiders struck one more time to make it a 4-0 contest.

Senior forward Sophia Jackson outmaneuvered a pair of opposing defenders and blasted a shot into the

Quincy Rallies For 2-1 Win Over North In Boys' Soccer

Alex Carmona-Montufar Scores Game-Winner On Penalty Kick

By TOM JOYCE

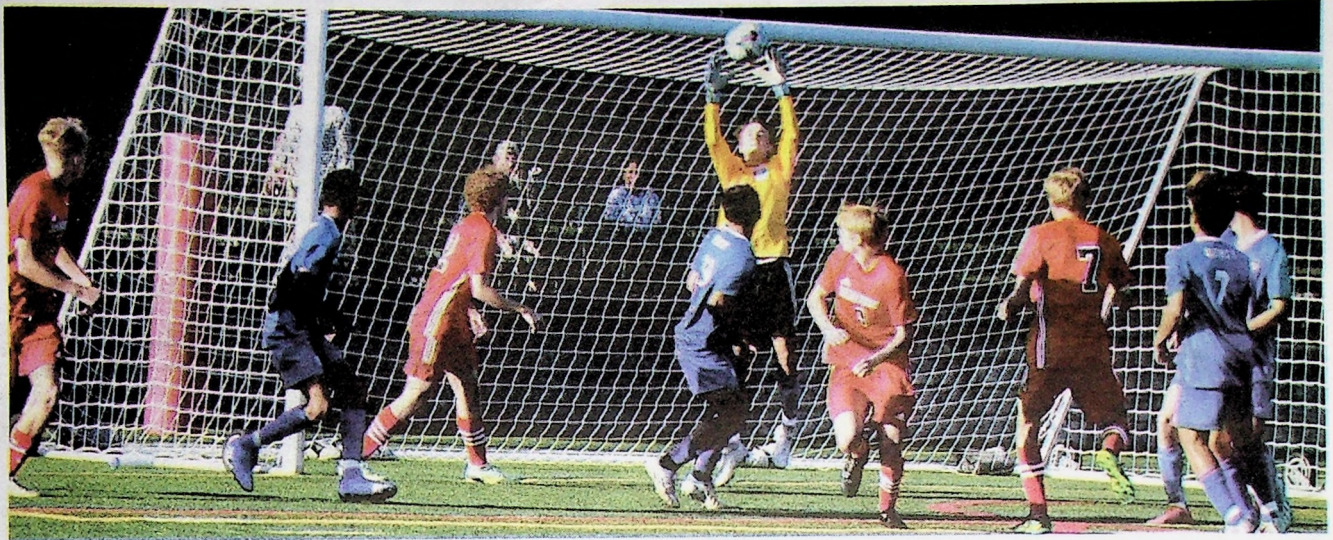

Playing from behind did not faze the Quincy High boys' soccer team.

The Presidents trailed for more than 30 minutes of their in-city rivalry match against the North Quincy Raiders last Saturday night at Veterans' Memorial Stadium. Even though they were down, they were able to make a comeback in this one. The Presidents won the match 2-1. With the win, they improved to 1-2-1 on the season. With the loss, the Raiders fell to 0-4-0.

Although the Presidents came out on top in this one, the Raiders struck first in this contest. Less than five minutes into the first half, the team took a 1-0 lead.

Senior Kyle DeBoer netted the first goal of the match for the Raiders; he headbutted a ball that made its way near the Presidents' net thanks to a free kick. It was the first goal scored by a Raiders player this season.

However, that lead wouldn't last forever for the Raiders. The Raiders held this 1-0 lead for about 35 minutes before the Presidents tied the game.

Toward the end of the first half, the Presidents scored a goal of their own. Kayron Campos was fed a pass and found an opening. He took a shot in traffic and found the back of the net. This tied the match at one apiece at the 38-minute mark.

The match was tied at one apiece going into the second half.

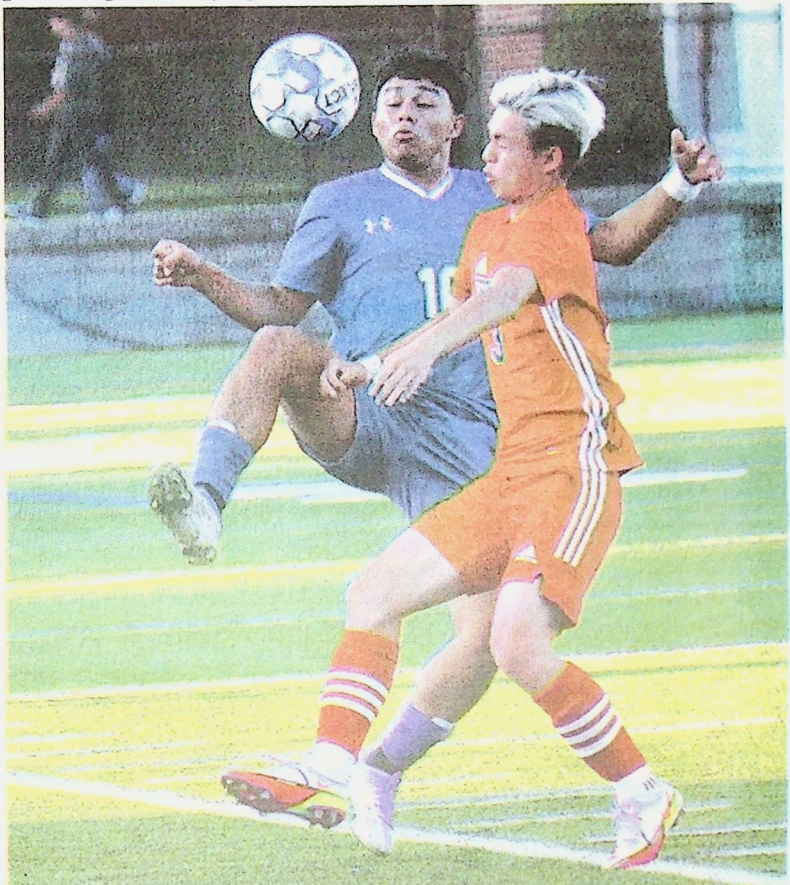

So while the Presidents trailed for much of the first half, they were able to take the lead in the second.

The team took a 2-1 lead on a penalty kick from Alex Carmona-Montufar. He found an opening on the bottom left side of the net with about 11 minutes remaining in the second half. It gave the Presidents their first lead of the game — and they didn't relinquish it.

It was the second of two games that the Presidents played last week. The team also picked up a point in the standings with a 1-1 tie against Silver Lake two days prior on Thursday.

Arrest In Road Race Incident

Quincy Police announced Tuesday morning that Zakar Bell-Warren, 20, of Hyde Park was taken into custody on an outstanding arrest warrant relative to a stabbing that occurred on Sept. 15.

According to police, during a thorough investigation, detectives learned that Bell-Warren and the victim were involved in a road rage incident that started in the area of Quincy Shore Drive and Sea Street. The incident continued down Quincy Shore Drive and ended in the area of Glover Ave and Pierce Street, where the victim was stabbed.

Two independent witnesses observed that the suspect was also in possession of a firearm. Based on this information, and other information obtained during this investigation, a detective assigned to the Bureau of Criminal Investigations applied for and was granted a search warrant charging Bell-Warren with armed assault to murder (knife) and assault with a dangerous weapon (firearm).

At approximately 7 a.m. Tuesday morning (Sept. 20), the Weymouth Police Department located and arrested Zakar Bell-Warren on the outstanding arrest warrant. Search warrants of Bell-Warren's vehicle and home are also being executed and additional charges may be filed at a later time.

The defendant was expected to be arraigned in Quincy District Court Tuesday.

"This should be a strong reminder that if you find yourself in a road rage incident, contact 9-1-1 right away. Follow instructions of the 9-1-1 operator, and never exit your vehicle to engage the other individual," Quincy police said.

Standing On The Corner Of Temple And Washington

A Message From StandOutQuincy4BlackLives

We all agree that Quincy has its busy corners; but I'm pretty sure that the spot we've chosen, in the heart of the city, is one of the busiest. Cars, buses, trucks, bikes and pedestrians whiz by on their way to destinations within the city or traveling to Boston or the South Shore. We provide an eye catching demonstration for those people on the tedious commute. Most people see us and respond in a lively and positive way- waving, smiling, honking their horns, and giving two thumbs up!

Not everyone, however, is happy to see us.

Perhaps you've seen us and wondered, who are those people standing on the corner every Thursday afternoon in Quincy Center? We're your friends and neighbors, actively advocating for racial Equity, Diversity and Inclusion in our city. We StandOut weekly with signs to express our point of view, and to show that Quincy is a welcoming and friendly place for everyone in our diverse and multicultural city.

We work with other community groups to advocate for justice and oppose racism. We began in September of 2020 and we are sometimes joined by Quincy Interfaith Clergy members, members of the City Council, and on one occasion, even the Mayor himself.

Although change occurs slowly, It's good to note that progress is being made. A first step was taken by the City Council, when they held city-wide hearings in January 2021, and, as a result, passed an Ordinance calling for the creation of a Department of Equity and Inclusion in the City of Quincy.

Unfortunately, the Mayor declined to fund the ordinance. Subsequently, the Quincy Public Schools have created a position within their budget after a walkout by students, protesting racism and inequity. Most recently, a position recommended by the Mayor's Commission For Equity, Diversity and Inclusion has been funded by the Mayor, and although he acknowledges that he would not support a DEI effort, he has created a watered down version of the role as a liaison, tasked with helping new residents in the city. These positions may be in the very early stages of development, but there is strong community interest in seeing them grow and develop some strength and mission. This effort to support DEI initiatives in the city continues to be a major focus of our attention.

We thought we'd share a little bit with you about an individual perspective, and give you some background on one of our members, and a snapshot of what it's like to StandOut in public, making your personal views plain for all to see. It does take courage.

As the first in our series, we'd like you to meet Patty Mortimer, a Quincy resident, in her 50s, married, working in a Boston Hospital and raising three great kids. She heard about us through another local group, March Forward Quincy, and she reports that she first participated in public actions in 2016, motivated by her opposition to rising racism and White Supremacy.

Mortimer says: "I'm thankful that StandOutQuincy provides an event where we can show love of our BIPOC neighbors in Quincy and oppose violence and discrimination. I believe that the Mayor and City Council can't ignore the constant message of the group."

She reports having a very positive experience of belonging to a group committed to standing up for what is right. She notes how often the people traveling by are strong in their encouragement and even gratitude. Her negative experiences on the corner mostly involve "... hearing a few white people loudly and angrily shouting negative comments to the group."

By taking action Patty wants to send this message: "I oppose racism and discrimination, and although there are loud voices from white supremacists, there are many among us who want a more diverse and inclusive society, where all people can thrive and live their lives in peace. Although I am not the target of racism, I cannot stand by and watch helplessly."

We're grateful to Patty for sharing her time in a busy life, as well as sharing her personal experience and viewpoint. In a subsequent column, we'll introduce you to another of our wonderful group. We welcome all people, anyone can join us on Thursday afternoon, 3:30 - 5:30 p.m. If you prefer to sit-in, we can provide you a seat!

We'll follow up in two weeks, with another member profile and community update. Questions may be addressed to mimibalsamo@gmail.com.

Movie Review: 'Barbarian'

By BOB GARVER

With "Barbarian," writer/director Zach Cregger of "The Whitest Kids U Know" becomes the latest performer primarily known for comedy to take a stab at the horror genre. The gold standard is of course Jordan Peele, whose "Get Out" in 2017 was an out-of-nowhere success both at the box office and awards podiums.

Then there's John Krasinski, who led "A Quiet Place" to critical and commercial success in 2018, and perhaps even more impressively, "A Quiet Place Part II" to becoming arguably the first post-pandemic blockbuster last year.

"Barbarian" isn't a creative game-changer or a box office powerhouse, but it gets Cregger's foot in the door for what might be a rewarding career in horror.

The film (at first) follows Tess (Georgina Campbell), a woman traveling under unenviable circumstances. It's dark, it's rainy, she's not familiar with the area, and she's in a bad part of Detroit. All she wants to do is check into her rental home, and wouldn't you know it, there's no key in the drop box. But there is a light on inside. It's a skittish man named Keith (Bill Skarsgard), who claims that he's the one renting the house this weekend. He offers to share the house, and the out-of-options Tess agrees. But something is off about Keith. He suffers from night terrors, he insists way too hard that he's not a threat, and he's played by Pennywise from "It." Tess finds her way into the basement, and clearly someone has been doing more than laundry down there. She finds an unlit passage and enlists the moderately-suspicious Keith to go ahead of her to investigate. Something horrific happens.

The story then follows A.J. (Justin Long), an actor plagued by scandal. He's the owner of the house, but it might just be on paper. He arrives a few weeks later to sell the property, and it very well may be the first time he's ever set foot in it. He too is driven to the basement, and after a detour upstairs (the comedian in Cregger rearing its head), he goes exploring the darkened, seemingly endless passage. No good comes of it. Then again, A.J. is a huge slimeball and maybe "no good" is too good for him.

We had a faint idea from earlier what was hiding in the passage, but A.J.'s exploration fleshes it out more, as does a flashback to the house's previous owner, Frank (Richard Brake), a sicko from the 1980's. Exposition from other characters, including local squatter Andre (Jaymes Butler) fills in the rest. The film revolves around the twist of what's in the passage, but it's not anything suggested by the set-up. I'll give you a hint like I did last week with "The Invitation": the entity is dead-set on treating the characters like something that can be found by changing the I in "Barbarian" to a Y and then dropping five letters from the title, including both R's.

I've seen a lot of critical praise for "Barbarian," and I'm sorry to say that I just don't get it. I think critics just wanted something to recommend amid the traditional August-September dry spell.

Yes, it's a better film than I'd expect from Cregger (whose only other theatrically-released directorial effort earned a dismal 5% on Rotten Tomatoes), but the last act sabotages a lot of what came before it. I can picture Cregger giggling as he was writing the ending, which isn't as clever or funny as he thinks it is. The good thing about the success of "Barbarian" is that it will afford Cregger the chance to make another horror movie, and hopefully that one can stick the landing. The best thing I can say about this movie is the admittedly-backhanded compliment that Cregger shows a lot of promise and I can't wait to see what he does next.

Grade: C

"Barbarian" is rated R for some strong violence and gore, disturbing material, language throughout and nudity. Its running time is 102 minutes.

James (Jim) Robert Watson of Hingham died suddenly, passing on Sunday, Aug. 28, 2022, at Linden Ponds. He was 85. He is already much missed.

Born in Boston on Oct. 25, 1936, Jim was the son of James and Emma (Herbst) Watson, founders of Watson Mailing Company in Boston's Fort Point. The eldest of four, Jim grew up in North Quincy with his three sisters, graduating from North Quincy High School in 1954, followed by a B.A. in History (1958) and an M.A. in Government (1961) from the University of Massachusetts Amherst.

Jim's sixty-year career as an urban and regional planner began with the Boston Redevelopment Authority in 1961, where, encouraged to pursue his Master's in City Planning at Harvard University's Graduate School of Design,

JAMES R. WATSON

he graduated in 1966. Soon after, Jim and family packed the station wagon, moving to Berkeley, California to join the Oakland Planning Department for President Lyndon Johnson's Model Cities program. Eventually, missing East Coast families, the Watsons settled in Hingham, Massachusetts. After working for Boston consulting firms Whitman and Howard and Parsons Brinckerhoff, Jim found his career home in the public sector as Comprehensive Planning Supervisor with Old Colony Planning Council, one of Massachusetts regional planning agencies. A reluctant retiree, Jim worked until he was 79.

A man of vast curiosity and interests—Jim loved sailing, live music, books, politics, cities, gardening, swimming, cycling, and photography. Constants included a love of family and wide-ranging conversation, his career, and service as a compassionate, concerned, engaged citizen.

Settling in Hingham in 1972 saw the beginning of Jim's five decades of civic service. A committed conservationist, Jim was an active member of the Conservation Commission, while his abiding concern for low-income housing led to his elected tenure with the Hingham Housing Authority. Jim's interest in the democratic process was global and local—he traveled to Nicaragua to observe elections, while as a member of the Democratic Town Committee, he loved creating floats for Hingham's 4th of July parade. An ardent lover of live music, Jim oversaw the Coffee House off the Square for many years—enjoying booking the musicians and never turning down an emcee opportunity. An avid conversationalist, James loved nothing more than to catch up with friends, neighbors, and family, happily conversing on any topic. Proud of his large, curated, library, his vinyl records, and his art collection—including work by his mother, a student of Boston's Museum School—his home celebrated all of these.

Jim was the devoted father of three daughters: Johanna M. "Joie" Watson of Belmont, Siobhan C. Watson and her husband Michael Follett of Bristol, England, and Caitlin A. DiGiandomenico and her husband Vincent of Marshfield. He was the loving grandfather of Thomas, Tristan, and Serena Watson-Follett, all of Bristol, England; Emily Rose Sullivan of Concord, NH; Harrison Charles Sullivan of Kingston, Lily Marguerite Sullivan of Hanson, the late Bronson Martin Curley, Brailey, and Bianca Murphy, both of Whitman. Jim was the big brother to Johanna Watson of Medford, Stephanie Watson of Concord, California, and the late Margaret (Watson) Bryant. He is survived by his former wife, Jeanne Cronin of Cambridge, and a loving family. Funny and bright, Jim was a special person.

A memorial service to celebrate James's life will be held at 2 p.m. Sunday, Nov. 20th, at the Old Ship Church, 107 Main St., Hingham, MA. Reception follows immediately at the Old Ship Church Parish House.

Memorial contributions in Jim's name to Doctors Without Borders www.doctorswithoutborders.org, American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) www.aclu.org, or Oxfam America Inc. by visiting: www.oxfamamerica.org.

Elizabeth A. Faherty, 94

Elizabeth Anne (Cataldo) Faherty, 94, of Randolph, formerly of Squantum, died peacefully, surrounded by her four loving sons on Friday, Sept. 9, 2022.

Elizabeth, known to most as "Betsy" was Born in Boston on Dec. 16, 1927, she was the daughter of the late William and Elizabeth (Roy) Cataldo.

Elizabeth was the beloved wife of the late David E. Faherty, who died in 1975. She was the devoted mother of David E. Faherty Jr. and his wife Kathryn of Brewster, William P. Faherty and his wife Melissa of Westford, John J. Faherty and his wife Sheila of North Attleboro, and Terence F. Faherty and his wife Maureen of Cohasset. She will also be remembered and cherished by her twelve grandchildren, eighteen great grandchildren, and many loving nieces, nephews, extended family and friends. Elizabeth was the dear sister of Joseph Cataldo and his late wife Mary of Duxbury, Thomas Cataldo and his wife Ruth Anne of Duxbury. Elizabeth was preceded in death by her dear brother William Cataldo and his wife Theresa, her loving sister Barbara Harper and her husband Quillie, her loving sister Virginia Shea and her surviving husband Richard of Canton, and her beloved granddaughter Patricia M. Faherty of Brewster.

Betsy loved God, loved her family and loved those who she knew as friends.

Betsy, a book could be written about her, and it still would not do her justice. The "dash" between Dec. 16, 1927 - Sept. 9, 2022, is full of life, happiness, joy, fun, laughter, sadness, loss, activities, travel, accepting, admonishing, generosity, a real hot ticket!

She loved her family & friends. Her family held a special place in her heart and there was plenty of room as it grew and continues to grow today. Betsy's "dash" was filled with love.

Squantum was her childhood home. That is where she developed her love for the ocean and swimming. A North Quincy high graduate, she went on to work for Dr. Fremont Smith. Betsy married Dave, the love of her life, Nov. 11, 1953. Honeymooned in FL where Dave got Betsy to walk in amongst a lot of alligators so he could get it on film. She was game. Then they started married life in an apartment on West Street in Quincy where David, Jr. was born in 1954 and Billy arrived in 1957. Time to move to Cochato Park in Randolph and soon after Johnny was born in 1960. Betsy turned the ranch into a loving home and after a little gap Terence arrived in 1968. Four boys, no girls but Betsy was not outnumbered. The neighborhood was the perfect setting for all kinds of fun things for kids; sports, bike riding, exploring the woods, cuts and scrapes, toil and trouble. David, Sr. made it clear the boys were going to BC High, education was extremely important and that was his desire for the brothers. After St. Mary's they graduated from BC High, and all went on to college.

Every year the 4th of July was a family reunion celebration in Squantum. All six siblings with their families arrived at 18' Bloomfield Street in Squantum Cataldo's, Faherty's, Harpers and Shea's. We watched the parade, participated in activities at the School and in later years played family softball. The big event was the cookout. Christmas was a repeat while celebrating the birth of Christ where the warm love of family permeated the Cataldo home.

Then her Dad, Poppy, died 4th of July 1972. The family was all home. 3 years later 3rd of July 1975 Betsy's husband Dave suddenly died. She persevered. The Fourth of July is still celebrated by the Cataldo family.

She loved to play bridge and she continued playing with her bridge group in Randolph for many years. She played tennis and then took up golf. Betsy became a member at Strawberry Valley in Abington.

The boat her husband bought and enjoyed for a few years continued to be used by her sons. Oh, the sea stories she could share, especially when Dave, Sr. was skipper. The "dash" is not even close to being filled yet. There were many major historical events that occurred from 1927 to 2022 and an incredible person, Betsy was part of it.

From 1975 to 2022 if you knew her, then you know who she was, if you did not, you missed out. Betsy took on her husband's job for many years. She took a brief break from work to grieve. She worked for a local company in Randolph as inside sales then moved on to work for Nauset Engineering, her sister Gini's husband Dick Shea, Sr.'s company. She worked there for many years but the commute to Lincoln was getting too much so with some guidance from her brother Tom she closed her working career out at State Street in Quincy. She made friends everywhere she went.

She retired from work and eventually moved to Great Brook Estates in Norton making new friends and bonded with "the single ladies". She completed her "dash" in Marshfield living closer to a lot of family. She started playing bridge again and surprisingly made a lot of friends.

She camped, had numerous trips, picnics included ("let's go for a ride" Dave would say) and days at beaches of Nantasket, Duxbury, and Cape Cod. She went on an epic family journey with Shea's out west. If you have not heard those stories you need to. As the years passed, she traveled the world with her family and friends. Some of the places she visited, Hawaii, the Caribbean, Japan, Korea, Ireland. What a great person to travel with!

This is but a glimpse of the "dash" that was Betsy Faherty.

Visiting hours were held Wednesday, Sept. 14, in the Keohane Funeral Home, 785 Hancock St., Quincy.

Her Funeral Mass was celebrated on Thursday, Sept. 15, 2022, at Divine Mercy Parish in Sacred Heart Church, Quincy.

Services concluded with interment in Blue Hill Cemetery, Braintree.

In lieu of flowers, memorial contributions may be made in memory of Elizabeth Faherty to Norwell Visiting Nurse Association & Hospice, 120 Longwater Dr., Norwell, MA 02061.

See www.Keohane.com for directions and online condolences.

Chuck was diagnosed with advanced stage 4 renal cell cancer. Chuck walks his Match Team, GUnited.

"Without the incredible work of Dr. Choueiri and his team on Yawkey 11, I would not still be here today," Chuck writes. "Toni and team have provided not only incredible care but life changing research that provides me with options and hope in this crazy battle. I am living proof of the incredible work Dana-Farber does."

"Throughout the past 33 years, the Jimmy Fund Walk has continuously supported life-saving research and cancer care at Dana-Farber. And the pandemic didn't stop us," said Zack Blackburn, director of the Jimmy Fund Walk. "Over the past two years, participants walked virtually and celebrated in their own unique ways. Now, we welcome them to walk the course in person. We are back, we are together, and we are stronger than ever."

Participants have the flexibility to choose from four distance options: 5K Walk (3.1 miles from Dana-Farber Cancer Institute), 10K Walk (6.2 miles from Newton), Half Marathon Walk (13.1 miles from Wellesley), or Marathon Walk (26.2 miles from Hopkinton). Participants can also choose to join the event virtually by "walking their way" from wherever they are most comfortable—in their neighborhood, on a favorite hiking trail, or on a treadmill at home. Virtual programming and supporting materials are available.

Along the course, walkers are treated to 12 refueling stations as well as poster-sized photographs of patients – Jimmy Fund Walk Heroes – displayed at each mile and half-mile marker as inspiration. All four routes of the Jimmy Fund Walk end at the Copley Square Finish Line Powered by Schneider Electric with a celebration complete with food, music, and a speaking program.

'Hey Old Friend' Reunion Show At Woodward School Sept. 30

JM Productions of Quincy is celebrating its 45th season with a special reunion show titled "Hey Old Friend."

The musical cabaret production will take place at The Woodward School, 1102 Hancock St., Quincy Center on Friday, Sept. 30th at 8 p.m.

Thirteen singers from productions produced over the past 45 years have agreed to appear on stage to take part in the musical celebration. There are many numbers from shows including "Mame," "Cinderella," "Jesus Christ Superstar" and from the annual "What Christmas Means to Me" holiday production.

The main cast includes Sheila and Jen Fahey of Neponset, Ann Kenneally Ryan of Quincy and Patty O'Connell Lee of Braintree. Accompanying the singers is Music Director Sarah Troxler from Plymouth and Jesse Stiglich from Marshfield who will oversee percussion. John McDonald will be the emcee and take part in a few of the musical numbers.

Other singers include: Kathy Teevens Fitzpatrick of Quincy, Maryjo Welch, Paul and Marybeth Kelly of Braintree, Janice Walker of Framingham, Cheri Kelly of Quincy and Cheryl Jost of Neponset. A few other surprise guests will take part in this cabaret performance.

"So many of our musical productions were staged at The Woodward School bringing us sort of full circle which is a nice gift for our cast and audiences alike," said John McDonald, producer and director.

"For over the 45 years JM Productions has presented our cabaret shows at Raffael's in Quincy as well as their facilities in Hull and Hingham," McDonald said. "The Common Market, Cella and Fox & Hounds restaurants as well as the function facility in Quincy, The Tirrell Room. We have also presented at Saint Ann's in Quincy and Neponset as well as Fontbonne and Sacred Heart in North Quincy. However, being back at The Woodward School seems most appropriate as so many of our full-scale musicals were produced there," McDonald said.

The musical revue reunion event is also a sort of a goodbye to the loyal fanbase as JM Productions will no longer be offering dinner theatre and cabaret shows. The excessive cost of food coupled with high gas prices forced the production company to close that part of the business.

Showboat Cruises from Squantum Point Park in Quincy and the Quincy

Comedyfest at The Marriott will still take place in 2023.

The company will also continue to collaborate with clients who are planning small- and large-scale events.

Salome's Stars

ARIES (March 21 to April 19) change that you'd hoped for is down the line. But, you still need to be patient until more explanations are forthcoming. Continue to keep your enthusiasm in check.

TAURUS (April 20 to May 20) Your social life expands as new friends come into your life. But, while you're having fun, your practical side can also see some positive business potential within your new circle.

GEMINI (May 21 to June 20) Your workplace situation continues to improve. Look for advantages you might have missed while all the changes were going on around you. A trusted colleague can help.

CANCER (June 21 to July 22) Resist the urge to hunker down in your bunker until things ease up. Instead, get rid of that woe-is-me attitude by getting up and getting out to meet old friends or make new ones.

LEO (July 23 to August 22) Now that you're back enjoying the spotlight again, you should feel re-energized and ready to take on the challenge of bringing those big, bold plans of yours to completion.

VIRGO (August 23 to September 22) A former friend would like to repair a relationship you two once enjoyed. Your positive response could have an equally positive impact on your life. Think about it.

LIBRA (September 23 to October 22) Resist making impulsive decisions. Stay on that steady course, as you continue to work out workplace problems. Be patient. All will soon be back in balance.

SCORPIO (October 23 to November 21) You might feel confident about taking a promising offer, but stay alert for what you're not being told about it. Don't fret. Time is on your side.

SAGITTARIUS (November 22 to December 21) People dear to you might be planning a way to show appreciation for all you've done for them. Accept the honor graciously. Remember, you deserve it.

CAPRICORN (December 22 to January 19) Congratulations! Your self-confidence is on the rise. This could be a good time to tackle those bothersome situations you've avoided both at home and at work.

AQUARIUS (January 20 to February 18) You feel obligated to return a favor. (Of course, you do.) But, heed advice from those close to you and do nothing until you know for sure what's being asked of you.

PISCES (February 19 to March 20) Your loving reassurance helped revive a once-moribund relationship. But, be wary of someone who might try to do something negative to reverse this positive turn of events.

BORN THIS WEEK: You are a wonderful matchmaker who can bring people together to form long-lasting relationships.

HOLLYWOOD – William Friedkin (Oscar-winning director of “The French Connection,” “The Exorcist” and “Killer Joe,” starring Matthew McConaughey) has finally chosen Kiefer Sutherland to star in his remake of Humphrey Bogart’s 1954 classic “The Caine Mutiny Court-Martial” as Lt. Commander Queeg. Friedkin’s updated the screenplay to a timelier schedule. Friedkin chose Sutherland to play Queeg because he feels that Sutherland is “one of the best actors in America, one of the very best!” He was a huge fan of Sutherland’s series “24.”

“Boy Meets World” Danielle Fishel and former NSYNC boybander Lance Bass are working on a movie about...their love story! Fishel confessed, “I dated Lance for a year while on ‘Boy Meets World,’ and Lance was my date to my senior prom.” Bass confessed he was too shy to get her phone number and asked bandmate Justin Timberlake to get it for him. Fishel recalled, “I thought I was going to marry Lance, and envisioned our future together. It turned out I wasn’t Lance’s type!” Bass admitted going to the prom with her was a big turning point for him. “It was the catalyst that made me start to accept myself, which still took a long time after that!” Bass came out as a gay man in 2006. Today, he’s part owner of “Rocco’s,” a hamburger joint across the street from a gay dance bar that he also owns in Boystown, Chicago. Fishel eventually got over him and, within three years, wed Tim Belusko (a classmate at California State University, Fullerton), which ended in 2016. In 2018, she married film producer Jensen Karp, and they have two sons.

I met 17-year-old Lori Loughlin when she starred as Jody Travis in “The Edge Of Night” in 1980. She then starred in “Full House” (1988-1995) and “Fuller House” (2016-2018), and was also a Hallmark series star in “When Calls the Heart,” from 2014-2019. But, her career came crashing down in 2019, when she and husband Mossimo Giannulli were arrested for their part in the 2019 “entrance exam cheating scandal.” She was immediately removed from filmed episodes of “When Calls the Heart” and became untouchable work-wise. After Loughlin served two months in prison, paying a $150,000 fine and completing 100 hours of community service, Hallmark quietly brought back her series “Garage Sale Mystery.” Hallmark’s decision to reinstate her (perhaps for next season’s “When Calls the Heart” as well?) followed after an overwhelmingly positive reaction from loyal, dedicated Hallmark fans, who feel Loughlin deserves a second chance. Anyone who disagrees with that, we “Call the Heart-less!”

KOVELS Antiques & Collecting

By Terry and Kim Kovel

Brownies — Comic characters are often used as models for toys, because they are already favorites of children. One group of toys was based on children’s books by Palmer Cox (1840-1924), an author who was born in Quebec, Canada, and lived in Panama and San Francisco as a railroad contractor and carpenter.

Around 1874, he began to study drawing and write and illustrate stories. Cox published his first Brownies in 1879. The Brownies were in many magazines, including Ladies’ Home Journal and a tobacco journal. Most Brownies were in books of humorous verse, comic strips, story books, and even on a cigar box label.

Each Brownie has a personality and trade, and was dressed appropriately for his job. You can see Uncle Sam, a policeman, Irish man, sailor and even a man in a top hat among the figures in the game of ten pins. Each figure is 12 inches high, made of lithographed paper over wood.

Brownies were so popular they were featured as paper dolls, trade cards, rubber stamps, card games, puzzles and cloth dolls. They were decorations on carpets, wallpaper, china, glassware and tableware. This boxed game of Brownie ten pins was estimated at $300 to $400 at a recent Bertoia auction and sold for $354, while a set in excellent condition would sell for $700 to $1,000.

Q: A reader (T.K.) sent us an interesting answer to a question we published previously: “Does the old liquor in an old mid-1800s whiskey bottle add to the value? Is it safe to drink? Is it legal to sell the whiskey in an old whiskey bottle if you are not licensed by your state?”

A: There are different rules about selling whiskey in the states. A long stay in a glass bottle should not change the whiskey the way storage in an oak barrel does, but if it is opened, it probably should not be served. But our reader says there are collectors who pay lots of money for old, unopened, full whiskey bottles. They are called “dusties,” and some collectors hunt for them in liquor stores. The writer knows someone who sold filled bottles of bourbon to a shop owner who sells “pours” to customers.

TIP: If you use valuable glass or pottery vases for flowers, use dried plants unless you protect the vase. Put a smaller glass vase inside to hold the water and the flowers. Hard water will leave a stain on pottery or glass.

• In 1992, Saab created a prototype vehicle called Prometheus that featured a joystick in place of a steering wheel. While it increased safety and space, it also proved more tiring and challenging to use, and the car never made it to production.

• The modern high jump

Q: Where have I seen the actress Michelle Yeoh before? I recently saw her in the film "Everything Everywhere All at Once," and I'd like to see more of her work. — J.K.

A: Michelle Yeoh was a big action star in Hong Kong before making it in Hollywood, and she was even known for doing her own stunts. Here in America, she starred opposite Pierce Brosnan in the James Bond film "Tomorrow Never Dies," but it was in 2000 that she garnered the most attention yet by starring in the Oscar-winning international film "Crouching Tiger, Hidden Dragon," directed by Ang Lee. Yeoh has worked nonstop ever since in movies like "Memoirs of a Geisha," "Guardians of the Galaxy Vol. 2" and "Crazy Rich Asians." She's also part of the "Star Trek" family, having played an emperor on the series "Star Trek: Discovery," but her upcoming role might possibly be her biggest one yet. She'll play Dr. Karina in the next four (!) "Avatar" films, which consists of four sequels being released from 2022 to 2028.

"Everything Everywhere All at Once" is the best showcase yet for Yeoh's acting talent and could very well result in Yeoh earning her first Oscar nomination.

Q: Was Leah Remini at her best friend Jennifer Lopez's wedding? I never read anything about their friendship ever since J.Lo reunited with Ben Affleck. — N.W.

A: No, Leah Remini did not attend her bestie's Georgia wedding ceremony to Ben Affleck, but she appears to have had a good reason. Her daughter was going off to college that same week, and Remini didn't want to miss spending that milestone with her. Some people are speculating that Remini might not approve of Affleck, since he broke Lopez's heart when they first dated 20 years ago, but if that's the case, Remini isn't sharing her thoughts with the public. The lovebirds did have their own children in attendance: Ben's three kiddos were there, along with Lopez's twins. Also among the guests was Affleck's best pal, actor Matt Damon. The two famously won an Oscar together as screenwriters of the 1997 film "Good Will Hunting" and have weathered many ups and downs over the years.

Q: Is it true that "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman" is being rebooted? Will Joe Lando be returning along with Jane Seymour? — D.W.

A: There aren't any plans at the moment to revive the early '90s western drama "Dr. Quinn, Medicine Woman," but the Lifetime network is reuning the attractive stars in an upcoming holiday movie. It's been three decades since Jane Seymour and Joe Lando first graced our screens on CBS on Saturday nights, but fans only have to wait until November for their movie to premiere. According to "Variety," in "A Christmas Spark," Seymour will play a recently widowed woman who decides to direct the town's Christmas pageant, while visiting her daughter over the holidays. There, she meets Hank, played by Lando, "the town's most eligible bachelor."

Building a Pet First-Aid Kit

DEAR PAW'S CORNER: I read in a guide about cutting dogs' toenails that styptic will stop bleeding if you cut their paws. What is that, and where do I get it? — Perry in Dallas

DEAR PERRY: Styptic powder can be used on small nicks and tiny cuts to stop bleeding and reduce pain. That's helpful when trimming pets' toenails, which can be a traumatic experience for them, especially if you should trim a little too far up the nail and accidentally cut the quick. The powder is applied with a cotton ball or soft cloth. Most owners keep it right next to them as they trim their pets' nails, so it can be applied immediately. In fact, styptic powder should be an essential part of something every pet owner has: an easy-to-access first-aid kit for their pets. You don't have to buy a complete kit; you can assemble a few key items and store them in a tightly sealed plastic container.

In addition to the powder, a pet first-aid kit should have gauze and tape, a small bar of soap, a disinfectant like hydrogen peroxide or alcohol wipes, Benadryl (plain, with no ibuprofen or acetaminophen), cotton balls and disinfecting hand wash (for you). Its main purpose is to treat small cuts and scrapes, but you can add other items that you think are essential, including the veterinarian's phone number, extra identification tags, copies of your pet's shot records and a spare leash. More ideas can be found at the Humane Society of the United States' website.

"Sidney" (PG-13) — Produced by Oprah Winfrey, this documentary covers the life of the late legendary actor Sidney Poitier. With a humble beginning in the Bahamas, Poitier immigrated to Miami and found that he had a completely different perspective about race than those in the United States during the 1950s. When launching his acting career, Poitier refused to play roles that minimized or disrespected Black people because of the color of their skin. He instead chose roles that allowed him to maintain his power. In that choice, Poitier paved the way for others to follow in his footsteps, not just in a filmmaking capacity, but, in a societal capacity as well. "Sidney" premieres Sept. 23. (Apple TV+)

Riddle answer: _____

Hiatal Hernia Is Not Correlated to Asthma Medication

DEAR DR. ROACH: I am 80 years old, still work full-time and have generally good health, except for adult-onset asthma. Advair 250/50 was prescribed for me over 10 years ago, and I've been taking it regularly each morning, thoroughly rinsing each time to prevent thrush. About five years ago, I developed an abdominal hernia just below my waistline. My primary physician referred me to a general surgeon, who did a very thorough exam, including an MRI from the jaw down. He discovered an esophageal hernia in addition to the abdominal hernia, and told me that a specialist would have to perform the double surgery. His advice was to avoid surgery, leaving it as a last resort. He prescribed famotidine twice daily to preclude acid reflux. That generally works, but not always.

My question is, does Advair 250/50 cause or contribute to an esophageal hernia? -- D.A.A.

ANSWER: A hiatal hernia ("hiatus" means "gap" in Latin), also called an esophageal or paraesophageal hernia, is when the hole in the diaphragm through which the esophagus passes is larger than normal, so other abdominal organs, especially the stomach, can slide through the hole from the abdomen into the chest.

Most hiatal hernias are thought to be congenital, meaning you were born with the propensity to have a larger-than-needed hole in the diaphragm. Most people with this condition have no symptoms and do not need treatment. The unusual person with symptoms from a sliding hiatal hernia is usually treated medically. Like you, they are prescribed famotidine, which reduces stomach acid. In the rare case when the paraesophageal hernia is so large that the stomach gets stuck inside the chest, or when other abdominal organs enter the chest, a person may require surgery.

Neither asthma nor Advair, a combination of an inhaled steroid (fluticasone) and a long-acting beta agonist (salmeterol), is related to hiatal hernias.

DEAR DR. ROACH: I'm a 63-year-old male who does weight-bearing exercises three or four times a week. Also, I am on multiple blood pressure meds, including atenolol, which slows the heart rate. What is the target heart rate while on this drug, for maximum cardiac health? -- H.C.

ANSWER: There are two ways to answer your question, the difference being the target resting heart rate and the target exercise heart rate.

The goal for atenolol as a blood pressure medicine is not the resting heart rate, but the resting blood pressure. However, atenolol and other beta blockers are seldom used as the first medicine to treat blood pressure, except in cases where beta blockers are also useful for something else.

Still, when a person requires multiple medications, beta blockers are often used as a second- or third-line treatment. If a person has good control of their blood pressure at a heart rate of 80, the medication is successful. However, most times, the resting heart rate needs to be in the 50s or 60s for the blood pressure to come down to goal in a patient taking a beta blocker.

The target exercise heart rate is usually recommended to be between 55% and 85% of your maximum heart rate, which can be measured by a stress test, or estimated by a calculator. Unfortunately, the calculator is only a rough guide at best, especially in women and middle-aged (or older) people, and beta blockers have variable effects on individuals.

Dr. Roach regrets that he is unable to answer individual questions, but will incorporate them in the column whenever possible. Readers may email questions to ToYourGoodHealth@med.cornell.edu.

1. The Little River Band, in 1978. Recording the song was difficult until the perfect keyboard player came into town just as the band was about to give up. One more shot and there it was, a hit.
2. April Wine, in 1985. The group was under contract for one more album, but by the time they produced this one, the group had already broken up. They managed to pull it off with the use of session musicians and two original members of the band.
3. The Box Tops, in 1967, three months after "The Letter" was released.
4. The Who, in 1967.
5. "Pink Cadillac," by Bruce Springsteen in 1984. The song stayed on Billboard for 14 weeks and was later covered by numerous others, including Natalie Cole and Jerry Lee Lewis.

Riddle Answer:

Harvesting Red And Green Tomatoes

By MELINDA MYERS

Nothing beats the flavor of fresh-from-the-garden tomatoes. Harvesting when they are fully ripe ensures the best flavor for eating fresh, cooking, and preserving.

Visit your garden often and watch for the fruit to turn from green to fully colored. Then leave them on the plant for five to eight days. Vine-ripened tomatoes have the best flavor for using fresh or preserving.

Check plants regularly and keep harvesting, so the plants continue to produce. This also reduces problems with insects and disease organisms attacking overripe or rotting fruit. Store mature, fully colored tomatoes in cool, 45-to-50-degree conditions with high humidity. They will last about seven to 14 days in these conditions.

When growing indeterminate tomatoes, you will notice the plants keep growing and producing more flowers and fruit until the frost kills the plant. Redirect the plant's energy from sprouting new blossoms and fruit to ripening the fruit that is already on the plant. Prune off the stem tip of indeterminate tomatoes about a month before the average first fall frost in your area. This allows the existing flowers to develop into fruit and the existing fruit to mature before the end of the growing season.

Extend the harvest season with the help of floating row covers. These fabrics allow air, light, and water through, but trap heat around the plants. Protecting plants from the first few fall frosts often provides time for more tomatoes to ripen.

Sometimes you cannot protect plants from frost or hungry critters prevent you from leaving the tomatoes on the plant to fully ripen. You can pick any tomatoes that are starting to show color before the killing frost and finish ripening them indoors. The blossom end should be greenish white or starting to color up. Use blemished and cracked fruit right away since these do not store well.

Store green and under-ripe tomatoes in a cool 60-to-65-degree location to maximize their storage life. Set the tomatoes on heavy paper spread apart so they are not touching. Or wrap them individually in newspaper so the fruit do not make direct contact. This helps prevent rot spreading from one fruit to the next.

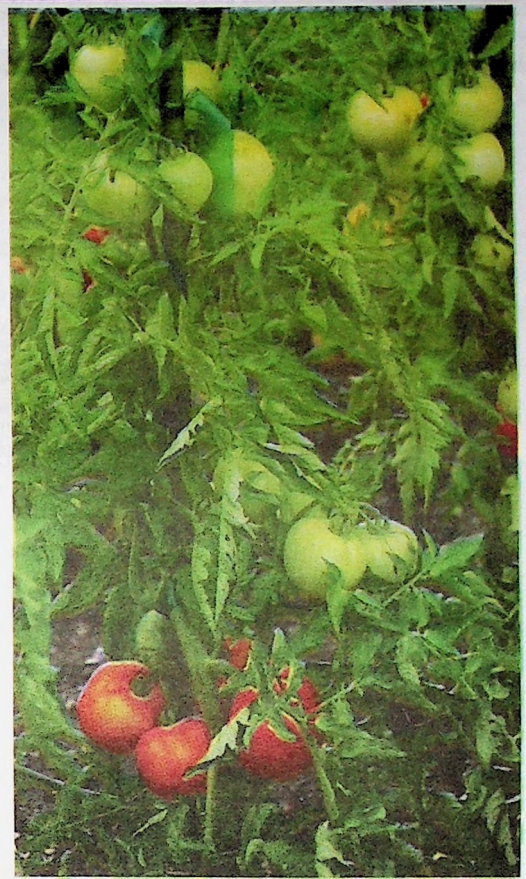

These tomatoes will ripen over the next few weeks. You can speed up the process by moving a few tomatoes to a bright, warm location a few days before they are needed.

Extend the tomato season next year by growing a Long Keeper. The flavor is not as good as vine-ripened fruit, but you can pick these before the first fall frost and enjoy garden tomatoes for up to three months.

And don't let the rest of the green tomatoes go to waste. Use them for frying, chow chow, green salsa, and other tasty treats.

Keep harvesting and enjoying your garden-fresh tomatoes as long as your growing season allows. Then make space to store them a few weeks after the first fall frost.

Art Quilts Display Continues In October At MPL Gallery

Continuing a display which started this month at the Milton Public Library, a wonderful collection of art quilts will now be extended through Oct. 29th.

This lovely fabric exhibit called "Not Your Grandma's Quilts" is being shown in the Wotiz Gallery through the end of this month. As a teacher, artist and quilter, Barbara Graceffa is self-taught and has received several awards for her work, including "Best in Show – Blue Ribbon Quilt" at the Marshfield Fair. She is an instructor at the New England Quilt Museum located in Lowell, and also teaches many different classes about design, decluttering, home staging, and more, having also presented some virtual talks at the Milton Public Library.

This gallery collection will show 20 traditional and contemporary quilts and wall hangings which Barbara started exhibiting in 2018. Her pieced and applique wall quilts are simple in design, but they are unique in that her choice of fabrics and how she pairs them, transforms them, and sometimes embellishes them makes her work stand out from other quilters' art. In her first juried show, her art quilt "Out on a Limb" was chosen by The Brush Gallery to appear in its annual art quilt exhibition.

The Wotiz exhibit is Graceffa's fourth solo display in the past six years, and she is a member of four quilt guilds from Abington to Arlington. She is also a talented columnist for The Quincy Sun and works with clients as an interior decorator. For more information about her work, her website is: sec-interior.com

"GOOD HAIR DAY," a quilt by Barbara Graceffa, is among her fabric quilts on display through Oct. 29 at the Milton Public Library.

Graceffa's quilting journey started down a well-travelled path 40 years ago but diverged "somewhere ages and ages hence." Trading traditional patchwork bed coverings for artistic wall quilts, she now looks at design, creativity, technique, color, fabric and embellishment through a different lens, and as Robert Frost says in his poem "The Road Not Taken?" "...and that has made all the difference."

The public is welcome to view the exhibit at the MPL.
